'Roosevelt's Slump,' Says Baruch

Deal Policy Attacked by Financier

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Bernard Baruch, New York financier, told a Senate committee today that government policy was more responsible for unemployment than anything else.

"I say it with regret, but I would be less than candid if I failed to express my opinion that unemployment is now traceable more directly to government policy than to anything business could or should do," said the white-haired financier.

He recommended enactment of wage-hour legislation, which, he said, "seems to me a necessity of our times," but criticized some other administration policies, par-

Gas Quells Youth in Brockton

Ex-Inmate of Asylum Fired Five Shots At Police

BROCKTON, Feb. 28—A 17-year-old boy, son of a police officer, suddenly went berserk in his home today, grabbed his father's loaded service revolver, chased his parents and brother to the street and fired five shots at policemen trying to capture him.

The youth, Frederick Gormley, Jr., of Holbrook avenue, in the Montello section of the city, defied police until two state troopers forced him, unarmed, from his room with tear gas.

According to police, the youth had been under treatment for a nervous disorder in Foxboro State Hospital and had been recently released.

FIRES AT OFFICER

Escaping from his son's sudden rage, the father notified fellow officers. They, in turn, called state police at West Bridgewater barracks who responded with tear gas guns and grenades.

2 More Held As Spy Case Is Hushed

By PAUL GALLICO

(International News Service Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—As dramatically as it was raised last Saturday, the curtain fell today on the greatest international spy plot uncovered in this country since the World War.

It was rung down by Reed Vetterli, head of the local federal bureau of investigation) who said:

"There is no news today. There will not be any news on this subject in the near future. Nothing more will be given out."

But behind the curtain, the drama plays on. G-men are making swift, sharp raids, or are setting elaborate traps to catch more foreign agents operating in this country.

History in the Making —INS Tells It FIRST

ON February 21 Anthony Eden's resignation as British foreign secretary was published in all American newspapers.

This sensational and historic occurrence was no surprise whatsoever to the readers of the Hearst newspapers and of other prominent publications in which the despatches of Mr. Hearst's International News Service appear.

Eden's resignation was FORETOLD exclusively by the International News Service several days before it occurred.

In still another report, the diplomatic and political crises which caused Eden to give up his cabinet office were ALSO DIVULGED EXCLUSIVELY by International News Service.

The first of these despatches was cabled from London by William Hillman, International News Service correspondent, on February 11. In part it said:

"A CRITICAL split in the British cabinet over questions of foreign policy was moving toward a climax tonight and threatening to exert wide repercussions throughout nervous Europe...

"One London newspaper will say tomorrow that Eden may soon resign from the cabinet because of opposition to Chamberlain's methods of trying to APPEASE THE NAZI 'FASCIST POWERS'."

The second despatch was sent from London on February 14 by Kingsbury Smith, also an International News Service correspondent.

Regarding this second despatch—and the complete confirmation given to it by the Eden resignation—the Cleveland News said editorially on February 22:

"This is a slight brag. A week ago yesterday, International News Service delivered and the News published a cable, on the authority of the I. N. S., London bureau, stating that England and Italy had arranged A NEW DEAL UNDER WHICH ITALY WOULD 'QUIETLY' DROP OUT OF SPAIN, BRITAIN WOULD RECOGNIZE ETHIOPIA, AND ITALY AND BRITAIN WOULD BECOME FRIENDS.

"Toward the end of the cable, there was a terse sentence: 'This is a complete and serious reversal

60 Jarred As Cars Crash

Sixty passengers were shaken up and six claimed injuries today when two Elevated trolley cars collided in Park street subway.

The collision was between a car stopped at Berth 2, southbound, in the subway, and a Watertown car leaving Berth 4, directly behind.

As a result of the rear end collision, traffic in that part of the subway was delayed, Elevated officials said, beginning at 1:35 p. m.

Elevated officials said the first car, in berth 2, was an Arborway, Jamaica Plain, car, carrying 35 passengers.

The Watertown car in berth 4, they said, carried 25 passengers.

When the second car started up, the motorman apparently misjudged his distance, according to the officials.

Gas Kills Woman In Everett Home

One woman died and four other persons were overcome today as gas fumes spread through their home in a two-story building in Revere Beach Parkway, Everett.

Mrs. Edith Webber, 42, was found dead on the kitchen floor of the basement apartment. In an adjoining bedroom firemen and police found Miss Mary Sullivan, 26, a companion, in a critical condition.

Unable to rouse her companion in the same apartment, Miss Rose Smith, 25, Mrs. Bates called police, dashed water in Miss Smith's face and carried her to the street.

Police reported two jets open on a cooking range in the kitchen, where Mrs. Webber was found. Dead also near the woman's body was a fox terrier.

Medical Examiner John Paul Reardon, after an examination of Mrs. Webber's body declared that death was due to "accidental asphyxiation by illuminating gas."

Mrs. Bates was treated by firemen.

Occupants of the second-floor apartment were also treated. They were Mr. and Mrs. Harris Aronson who were unaware of the danger until police arrived.

His physicians had said they would become "really hopeful" of the ultimate recovery of the chief of the armies if he could overcome his inability to swallow.

FATHER OF MISSING BOY GETS SLEUTHS' 'HANDS OFF' PLEDGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP)—Murray Levine, father of Peter Levine, 12-year-old New Rochelle, N. Y., schoolboy who has been missing since last Thursday, said today he had received promises from federal and Westchester county authorities that he could negotiate without any interference "with those who may be holding my boy."

Levine declined to state whether he had definite information his son had been kidnaped, nor would he comment on a report that $60,000 ransom had been demanded.

The father, a well-to-do New York attorney, first called in New Rochelle police and then sought the aid of the Federal Bureau of Investigation after his boy disappeared.

AIDED IN SECRECY

In his statement, the father explained that he had "made every effort to keep this from the public, because of my desire to do everything I humanly can to meet the demands of those who may be holding my boy.

"The authorities, local (Westchester county) and federal, have promised me that I am to be permitted to negotiate for and accomplish the return of my son without any interference on their part," he continued.

BOY IDOLIZED G-MEN

While Levine himself refused to comment, a New Rochelle police officer said a note demanding $60,000 ransom had been received.

Samples of Peter's handwriting were compared under a microscope with the handwriting of the note.

It was understood the ransom note was delivered by messenger before the family knew Peter had disappeared.

Ex-Soviet Editor, 20 Others Doomed

Papers He Edited Predict Death for Bucharin In Latest Red Purge "Trial"

MOSCOW, Feb. 28 (AP)—The two leading Soviet newspapers, Pravda and Izvestia, both edited at various times by Nikolai Bucharin, indicated today that death awaited the editor and twenty others who are to go on trial Wednesday in the latest episode of Joseph Stalin's purge of enemies of his regime.

The stage was set for one of the most sensational of Russia's recent series of trials of fallen Soviet leaders. Treason and murder were the main charges. The list of defendants was larger than in any of the previous Moscow trials.

Pravda, Communist party organ, said the accused would "pay dearly" for the lives of Maxim Gorky, the famous writer; Vyacheslaff Menzhinsky, once head of the secret police, and Valerian V. Kuibisheff, chief of the first five-year plan.

The deaths of these three, previously laid to natural causes, were, in part, the basis of charges of a murder-treason plot on which the 21 will be tried before a military tribunal.

IMPLY GORKY POISONED

Izvestia, the government organ, said "nothing and nobody will save them." Implying that Gorky had been poisoned, Izvestia used the metaphor,

"The snake's bite was fatal to the lion."

Joseph E. Davies, retiring United States ambassador to the Soviet Union, was expected to follow the trial with unusual interest, since one of the defendants, N. N. Krestinsky, former assistant foreign commissar, was the first Soviet official to receive him when he took the Moscow post.

Davies saw Krestinsky in January, 1937, to ask for an appointment with Michael Kalinin, head of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee, to present his credentials.

Although officials failed to make such an announcement, it was assumed that the defendants, who allegedly were linked with the exiled Leon Trotsky, already had confessed their guilt.

EX-PREMIER ON SPOT

Most prominent among the 21 were former Premier Alexis I. Rykoff, who succeeded Rusnin and held office nearly two years, and Bukharin, chronicler of the Red revolution and editor of Izvestia until March, 1937.

Next in order were five cabinet ministers: Gerflan G. Yagoda, once head of the secret police; Gregory F. Grinko, former finance commissar; Vladimer L. Ivanoff, former chief of the timber industry; A. P. Rosengaltz, once commissar of foreign trade; and M. A. Cherkoff, former commissar of agriculture.

They figured largely in the charge, made against the entire group, that they had plotted to overthrow the Soviet regime by terrorism with the aid of foreign powers, which would grab rich areas of the Soviet empire as a reward.

NOTED DOCTORS DOOMED

Dr. L. G. Levin, head of the Kremlin Hospital; Dr. D. D. Pletnyeff, famous Soviet heart specialist; and Dr. I. N. Kazakoff, head of a large clinic, were accused of the deaths of Gorky, Menzhinsky and Kuibisheff.

Other defendants were: K. G. Rakovsky, former ambassador to France; Akmal Ikramoff, former "political boss" of the Uzbek Soviet republic in central Asia; Faysulla Khodjaieff, former president of Uzbek; I. A. Zelensky, former head of Consumers' Co-operatives; S. A. Bessonoff, V. F. Sharangovich, P. T. Zubareff, P. P. Bulanoff, V. A. Maximoff and P. P. Krutchkoff.

Strike Ties Lynn Shoe Plants

A thousand Lynn shoe stitchers struck today protesting refusal of the Eastern Shoe Manufacturers Association to discharge Mrs. Eleanor Rooney, employer's price-maker, whom the workers charged with being "too officious."

Excluding their officers, the employees, members of the United Shoe Workers Union, met at Lasters Hall and voted to back their strike threat of last week with action.

The workers described the movement as a protest rather than a strike. Officials of the Lynn Joint bouncil of the union also deny the action constitutes a strike.

Two immediate effects of the stoppage occurred in the Lynn industry. One was the withdrawal of the Arcent Shoe Company from the manufacturers association and the other was the laying off of 1,000 workers at the eight other plants affected.

James Kyrios, president of the Arcent company, declared that he had notified the association of his firm's resignation and said that the stitchers in his factory would return to work this afternoon.

There was no picketing, but leaders of the protest demonstration asserted picket lines would be established if an attempt were made to hire strikebreakers.

Hitler 5-Year Rule Analyzed

Brin Cites Effect Nazis Have Had on German Nation

(This is the second and final installment of an article in which the policies of Hitler in the broader aspect are discussed. The first appeared in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.)

By ALEXANDER BRIN
Editor and Publisher, the Jewish Advocate

There is more at stake in Germany today than the destruction of the 600,000 Jews, tragic though it is. There has never been such an assault upon culture and Christianity since the days of Nero.

Hitler's Germany is striking at those values sacred to every lover of human progress.

DEMANDS THOUGHT

This warrants profound reflection by every Christian spiritual follower of Christ. The responsible followers and guardians of the moral and religious teachings of their people cannot be less concerned.

It is time for every Christian leader to strike a positive and aggressive note, the triumphant tone of a triumphant faith. The Nazis are entitled to substitute Hitler for Christ, Goering for Peter, Goebels for Paul, Rosenberg for Matthew, the Swastika for the Cross, Wotan for God.

REASON TO FIGHT

The Baptists, the Catholics, the Methodists, the Episcopalians, the Protestants have every reason to fight Hitlerism, for has not Hitlerism attacked for their Holy Cross which stands for love, the Swastiska which is a symbol of hate?

Attacks have been made on Protestant leaders, upon Catholic priests; the intrusion of storm troops in their churches, the vile assaults upon Catholic youths in Munich, and the imprisonment of prominent Catholic leaders is tangible evidence that all sections of the population now suffer.

What have the Nazis achieved in the past five years? They have converted Germany into one concentration camp. They have planted terrifying fear and distrust in the hearts of all the inhabitants. Buckets of blood have been endlessly spilled. No manner of reprisal was too cruel for dissenters from the return to a benighted Medievalism.

Germany has become a land which knows no justice and estan-muel be.

WIDE SPY SYSTEM

Who knows who is the spy? The Nazi spy system permeates every stratum of society. Its instruments include practically every hotel porter and every servant of the land—all in the employ of this omnipresent system. Censorship, suppression, spying, is the very tool of the Nazi Satans.

The Nazi revolution was more savage, more barbaric and more relentless than anything similar ever recorded in the annals of human history. Even a word said in jest may be reported by the nearest friend and the concentration camp is the award of humor.

Nazi leaders have driven hate into the hearts of children.

For the rising generation, they have glorified war and have introduced such words as "iron discipline" and "unyielding determination to annihilate."

Hitler glories in the unity he brought to Germany. What kind of unity is it?

SAYS FAIR PLAY KILLED

The Nazis achieved unity by darkening the spirit of fair play in the world. They have trampled upon the fundamental rights of millions of innocent and worthy German citizens, using and relying upon diabolical force to their end.

Every principle of civilization and humanity has been violated in depriving Jewish citizens of all their elementary rights of citizenship and civilization. And in plundering, torturing and killing many of their number without cause, as well as by cruel persecution, driving thousands of them to ruin, 150,000 to exile and countless thousands to suicide.

The Jews of Germany have an unbroken record of obedience and service of 1016 years and have contributed to the advancement of medicine, science, industry, art, literature, music for the glory of Germany and all mankind.

In the Balkans there is a growing feeling of hostility toward Germany. Russia has long looked askance at Hitler regime. Everywhere in Europe, Germany is regarded as an international pariah. Even in Germany there are beginning to be heard rumblings of discontent from the populace which has been fed on promises and ballyhoo when it wants bread and jobs.

CITES ACTIVITY HERE

After five years, Hitler has succeeded in establishing a totalitarian state. But that state is still shaky while Germany remains thus.

The most serious threat to the internal security of the United States which has existed since the Civil War is the Nazi activity in our midst, which should impel every lover of American institutions to sound a clarion cry of "America First."

The high privilege and special obligation of this generation of Americans is to regard themselves as trustees and guardians of American institutions and awaken to those insidious forces that would destroy our unity as a nation, that would array citizen against citizen and would undermine the foundation of our government through inner turmoil and domestic strife.

'Foe' Under 2 Fires

Sees 2 Distinct Far East Issues

Father Murphy Points To Manchuria, New Drive

(This is the second and concluding chapter of Father Murphy's discussion of Hitler's activities in Europe as they affect the world. The first appeared in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.)

By THE REV. J. F. X. MURPHY, S. J.
Professor of History, Boston College Graduate School

Most significant still is the declaration of German hostility to the Russian Soviet. To all those, and their number is legion, who see in Bolshevism a world menace, and not a baby one at that, but a gigantic foe, perhaps the mightiest that our civilization has ever faced, this assurance of German hostility to the Communist peril must come as a soothing balm.

Let any man cherish the most bitter hostility to Germany, whatever be his reason, nevertheless if he has eyes to see, he must know that in Communism civilization faces its fiercest foe.

Totalitarianism is abhorrent to any Catholic, to any American; and totalitarianism is of the very essence of Mexican Communism.

'LESS OF 2 EVILS'

Indeed the forefront of Hitler's offending is that he has copied so much of the malicious practice if not the theory of the Bolsheviki.

"Pinks" or "parlor Bolsheviki" in America pretend to see so much evil in "Fascism" and "Nazism" while heaping Communism with praise.

Is it conscious fraud or naive ignorance that possesses them? One doesn't like to believe the one; one can hardly believe the other.

Americans should detest Hitler and all his works and pomps; but it is precisely because he is vitiated with the cardinal vices of Communism that they should do so.

At the same time, on the general principle of "any port in a storm," or "of two evils, choose the less," Anti-Nazi Americans will welcome the Nazis as buffers against Bolshevism.

And this implies no acceptance of Hitler, no approval of his practice or theory, only a clear-sighted perception of the relative evils that lies at the heart of Nazi and Bolshevik alike.

As for Hitler's recognition of Manchukuo, it does not necessarily denote a complete backing of Japan against China. It is, rather, a preference for Japanese dominance over China rather than Russian, if foreign dominance there must be.

There are two quite distinct issues in the Far East. One is Japan's actual position in Manchuria; the other is the effort she is now putting forth against China proper.

SIDES WITH CHINA

In any attempt of Japan or any other foreign power to subjugate China, there is only one stand for any true American to take. And that is unqualified sympathy and support for the victim of the aggression. China has suffered frequently before this from many a European state.

America's hands are cleanest in the matter. As between China and Japan, if the war be isolated, Americans can make but one choice, and that is for and with China.

But is it exclusively a war between China and Japan? Czarist Russia had its ambitious designs upon the integrity of China, and Communist Russia in this has succeeded to the mantle of the Czars!

CHINESE LOSING OUT

Call it what you will, the Chinese are quietly being euchred out of this great portion of their realm. Japan's stand in Manchukuo needs a special paragraph. To begin with, Manchuria did not belong to China; China, rather, once belonged to Manchuria.

In the seventeenth century, the Manchu Tatars flooded from their home in Manchuria over China, and there set up Manchu rule. The capital they fixed in Pekin (the north capital) near the Manchurian border. Nanking (the south capital) in the heart of China, they abandoned. For more than two centuries and a half they maintained their supremacy until 1911, when the Chinese, educated in Europe and America, in Western nations, rose up in rebellion, expelled the Boy Emperor, Pu-Yi (he was but five years old) and established a republic.

DID NOT CONQUER

It would, of course, have been a bit of poetic justice, if China now conquered Manchuria. But that was not to be. Russia had long before fixed her eyes upon the coveted province.

For almost thirty years Japan has been trying to get Russia to keep her solemn promises to get out of Manchuria. Japan is vitally interested in excluding Russia, for Russian occupation of Manchuria would be a death-warrant for Japan. Russia's pre-occupation with the great war, and her domestic problems ever since have kept her from the full realization of her ambitions.

SEIZED OPPORTUNITY

And Japan seized her opportunity in restoring Pu-Yi, whom she had befriended, to the throne of his fathers. For, though expelled from the imperial throne of China, he has still his hereditary right to the throne of the Manchus.

That we may end where we began, we once more affirm that the partial approval of specific portions of Hitler's speech does in no way constitute an approval of every item in said speech, much less an approval of the whole platform or manner of action of the man or of his party.

ADOLF HITLER

In accompanying stories, final installments on articles analyzing the world-wide scope of Hitler policies, Alexander Brin, editor and publisher of the Jewish Advocate and Rev. J. F. X. Murphy, S. J., professor of history at Boston College Graduate School, today point out the menace to religion under the Nazi leader's regime.

for Foreign Secretary Eden.' It took the events of yesterday to indicate what a considerable scoop this was."

MEANTIME, on February 19, an International News Service despatch had revealed the essential details of Prime Minister Chamberlain's proposals made to Ambassador Grandi, of Italy, and had foretold British proposals to Germany regarding "progressive return of Germany's former colonies" and "A GERMAN GUARANTEE OF THE INDEPENDENCE OF AUSTRIA."

This series of "scoops" on historic current news events is only one of numerous such performances by the Hearst papers and International News Service.

The International News Service, through Mr. Hillman, also forecast accurately and exclusively the secret negotiations between the United States and England for a reduction of England's war debt and for mutual tariff concessions under the Hull program—a negotiation which both governments denied, but which Mr. Kennedy has now been sent to England to try to conclude.

Readers of this newspaper are of course familiar with the foreign despatches of Karl H. Von Wiegand and of H. R. Knickerbocker.

They remember also that the story of the long-suppressed Balfour document, buried since the World War in the archives of London and Washington, was a "beat" scored by William K. Hutchinson, International News Service correspondent; and only a few days ago International News Service obtained in Rome the exclusive signed story of Feodor Butenko, missing Soviet charge d'affaires, who had vanished in mysterious and apparently sinister manner from Bucharest.

AGAIN, on February 9, International News Service was first to report that Japan would COLDLY TURN DOWN THE BRITISH-AMERICAN DEMAND for an explanation of Japanese naval expansion plans.

Finally, the U. S. Army plans for construction of the Nicaragua canal was another exceedingly important news development reported exclusively by William H. Hutchinson through International News Service.

Such occurrences as these are not merely news—and interesting news at that.

They are MOMENTOUS HISTORY—and in them, readers of the Hearst papers and the International News Service despatches are peculiarly privileged to foreglimpse HISTORY IN ITS VERY MAKING.

Diplomat Lauds Campaign on 'Brutal War'

Dr. Markovich Praises Mr. Hearst's Drive Against Barbarity

(Special Cable to Boston Evening American)

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Feb 28—Dr. Lazar Markovich, former minister of justice of Jugoslavia and noted diplomat who represented that country at the Geneva disarmament conferences of 1926-1930, gave strong support in an interview today to the movement to humanize war.

His statement was in close accord with the policy urged by William Randolph Hearst and his newspapers calling for a world-wide ban against barbarism among fighting nations. He said:

"The Yugoslavian government had prepared a comprehensive proposal for the humanization of war during the (Geneva) disarmament conference. I represented the view put forward therein in Geneva. The conference, unfortunately, only reached a point where the use of bacillus was discussed.

KNOW WAR HORRORS

"A resolution to the effect that the use of bacillus in warfare should be banned, was made.

"As to the question of bombarding towns, affecting women and children, we are in full sympathy with the view that war should only be carried on by soldiers and that the peaceful population which does not partake in actions of war must not be regarded as belligerents.

"The Yugoslavian people are peace-loving and can only think with the greatest horror of the cruelties which their sons, women and children are to suffer in warfare.

AMERICA AIDS PEACE

"A nation may be on the highest peak of civilization, but if her soldiers are not compelled to respect the rules of international law, extraordinary violations of these laws may be expected if there are no sanctions.

"We reckon to a great extent with the pacifying activity of the American people which possesses great possibilities in this direction."

College Boys' Grammar Hit

Professor at the State Cites Mistakes

AMHERST, Feb. 28 (AP)—Faulty grammar of college students today came in for criticism from Professor Walter E. Prince of Massachusetts State College.

"The dangling participle," the State College English professor said, "is one of the most deadly pitfalls in the English tongue."

As an example he cited the sentence: "Having eaten our lunch, the boat departed."

"Everyone kept their seats," instead of "everyone kept his seat" was offered by the professor as improper use of a plural pronoun with a singular antecedent.

Another examples of improper grammar frequently used by college students the professor mentioned "due to," instead of "because of," "different than," instead of "different from," "had ought," instead of "ought."

Religions in Unity Pledge For World War on Atheism

Brotherhood Parley At Quincy High Attracts 1000

Greater Boston Catholic, Protestant and Jewish religious leaders today pledged themselves to unite in a fight against atheism and paganism.

Keynote of Brotherhood Day meeting in Quincy High School auditorium last night was the pledge of unity in an effort to maintain religious liberty in democratic nations and to re-establish respect and tolerance for religion throughout the world.

The meeting, conducted under the auspices of the Quincy Round table, was attended by more than 1000 persons.

LAUD HEARST MESSAGE

During the affair all three speakers lauded William Randolph Hearst's editorial published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser entitled, "A Union of Churches to Defend Religion Against Atheism and Paganism."

Father Barry who was the first speaker was introduced to the gathering by co-chairman Judge James A. Mulhall, of Quincy.

Father Barry in part said:

"The belief that we don't need religion seems to be rampant in many foreign countries.

"Religion alone is the basis of peace and unity and the great challenge that faces the Christian world today is Atheism and Paganism.

'RIGHT OF MAN'

"The basic principle of American democracy and which our forefathers granted us when they formed the Constitution was the right of man to practice free speech and religion. And it is upon that principality we must depend.

"It is quite different, however, when we look across the water at our less fortunate brethren who have been deprived of this privilege. And it is for that reason that we should unite here in this nation so we may prevent any repetition of what is happening overseas."

UNITY IS STRESSED

Rabbi Abrams gave a vivid worded picture of conditions that are now existing in various sections of the world and stressed the importance of unity and brotherhood among the civilized peoples of the world.

In part, Rabbi Abrams said:

"We will not enjoy peace in the world until we have brotherhood and good will among men. It is meetings of this caliber held here tonight that will aid materially in bringing about this objective.

"Religions are many, but religion is one and the essence of religion is for the uplifting of man and brotherhood.

"We must lose bigotry and racial prejudices in order to promote peace and democracy," concluded Rabbi Abrams.

CITES UNIVERSAL BASIS

The final speaker of the evening, Rev. Dr. Russell Stafford explained the principles of Protestant religion, especially the Anglo-Saxon Congregationalist, and the similarities of it to the Catholic and Jewish.

"The basic principle of our religions wher we get to the root is universal. They all stand for justice, brotherhood and liberty.

"It is up to all of us to promote the happy condition of universal brotherhood.

3 Groups Join To Halt Spread Of Atheism

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—Catholic, Protestant and Jew—joined today to hail the call of William Randolph Hearst for a united religious front to halt the spread of paganism and atheism.

From pulpits throughout the city, priest, minister and rabbi lauded Mr. Hearst's proposal for a brotherhood day for the advancement of all religion.

Three powerful religious groups, it is expected, will head a militant drive against anti-religious creed.

At the suggestion of prominent leaders of the clergy the federation of churches, the federal council of churches of Christ in America, the national conference of Jews and Christians, together with scores of other religious organizations, will be asked to unite in promoting national brotherhood days.

Expressing a view widely held by the ministers of the city, Dr. J. V. Moldenhawer, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, declared the time had come for action.

"There has been enough of talk," said Dr. Moldenhawer. "Let the federation of churches and other similar organizations take the lead in this and we will all be ready to do our part."

Rabbi Herbert Goldstein, president of the Rabbinical Association of America, said:

"I will do anything I can to aid in whatever practical proposal may be made to make brotherhood days a reality. My organization will join in any movement that will bring the Christian churches of the world together to promote universal brotherhood."

Jesuit Hails Hearst Fight Against Godless

A world-wide struggle between Christianity and atheism, likely to increase in intensity within the next few years, was seen today by Rev. F. E. Low, S. J., professor of philosophy at Boston College.

The people or the United States are now witnessing the early stages of this conflict, Father Low declared.

In an interview with a Boston Evening American reporter, Father Low gave praise to the editorial printed in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, entitled, "A Union of Churches to Defend Religion Against Atheism and Paganism," written by William Randolph Hearst.

The noted Jesuit declared:

TIMELY APPEAL

"The editorial which appeared in the Boston Sunday Advertiser yesterday and written by William Randolph Hearst is timely in its appeal to the people of all religious convictions to recognize a serious and malicious enemy in the form of atheism as practiced by the Communists, and the threat to religion which is inherent in all forms of the totalitarian state.

"Recently Hilaire Belloc in a book called The Crisis of Civilization proved conclusively the fact there is now going on a world wide struggle between Christianity and atheism.

"Our own country is already witnessing the early stage of this conflict. It is likely to increase in intensity within the next few years.

CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES

"Mr. Hearst has also stressed in his editorial the fact that our civilization will stand or fall with the acceptance or rejection of true Christian principles of faith and morality. These principles are rejected by the radical elements in their endeavor to make the individual subject to the state.

"Both Stalin and Hitler have recently said that anything is moral which helps their respective forms of government. Neither the rights nor the lives of individuals are secure under such a godless and unsound standard.

"Even democracy which strives to protect the individual and allow him the fullest expression of liberty, cannot survive the attacks of numerous and determined hostile forces unless it is based on the safe principles of genuine honesty and justice as well as mutual charity in our own private and public lives.

COURSE MARKED OUT

"The sanest and truest brotherhood of men on religion must find our people united in the practice of solid Christian virtue as taught by Christ in His sermon on the Mount and practiced even since, by all His true followers.

"If we fail to follow the course marked out by Our Divine Teacher and Guide, we are likely to fall easy victims to the campaign of Satan now being waged on many battle fronts."

"Of course, the state committee endorses no one before the convention," McGrath hurried to point out, "but it always has been the rule that the more hectic the primary battle, the bigger our victory at the polls."

A flood of circulars were in the mails today urging nomination of the President's son to give strength to the party ticket.

Coast Churches Pledge Aid in War on Pagans

Special to Boston Evening American

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28—Churches unite! Fight for religious freedom and fight on a common front against the subversive, pagan doctrines of Fascism and Communism.

This message rang from pulpits throughout Southern California Sunday.

It spoke a mighty indorsement of a nationwide movement for unification of religious fronts, promoted by an editorial by William Randolph Hearst.

From the Right Rev. W. Bertrand Stevens, Bishop of the Los Angeles diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, came assurance that members of his faith would lend every aid to further the religious move. He said:

"I am much interested in any plan to bring the churches together. I believe the greatest hope of the church is to unite to combat forces of paganism and secularism.

"Mr. Hearst's suggestion for several brotherhood days has my heartiest approval. I am sure all churches will co-operate wholeheartedly."

Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, noted liberal, said:

"It is an amazing, powerful and timely editorial. Particularly so in view of the conspiracy that exists in Europe, and participated in by both right and left elements, to destroy American democracy."

"As a member of the central council of Churches of Christ in America I feel very strongly the need for bringing all the Christian churches into a strong body for defensive action."

All Creeds Join To Battle Foes Of Religion

Ministers, Rabbis Back Brotherhood Plan Of Mr. Hearst

Special to Boston Evening American

CHICAGO, Feb. 28—Admitting the menace of atheism and paganism emanating in the guise of state religion from dictatorship governments, Christian clergymen and Jewish rabbis moved rapidly today to form a united front.

They agreed whole-heartedly with the stirring attack issued in New York by Episcopal Bishop William Thomas Manning against Communism and Fascism and with the editorial by William Randolph Hearst denouncing state religions as a new anti-religious creed.

Favorable expressions were heard from all sides on Mr. Hearst's suggestion for a series of brotherhood Sundays as one means of bringing about united defensive action against the common foe of all religion.

Speaking from the pulpit of the Rogers Park Methodist Episcopal church, Dr. A. L. Lassen, "anous historical authority and rabbi of Congregation B'nai Zion, declared Christianity and Judaism both were at stake. He said:

"The church and the synagogue cannot be complacent. All religion is menaced regardless of what its symbol may be. There can be no separation of their common interests.

"An effort is being made to de-religionize 350 millions of people in Europe and Russia. It will happen unless there is counter-actions."

The Rev. Joshua Oden, pastor of Irving Park Lutheran Church and former president of the Chicago Church Federation, said:

"A federation of faiths based on the common belief of Catholic, Protestant and Jew that there is a God should be brought about. The only real bond is religion. There all men can meet."

Dr. John Thompson, pastor of Chicago Temple of the Methodist Episcopal Church, declared himself unequivocally in favor of a defensive alliance against Atheism. Dr. Thompson said:

"I favor calling a meeting of faiths, built on the brotherhood ideal, which would present a united front against Atheistic Communism, Fascism and all other 'isms.'"

Hearst's Appeal for Church Union Hailed

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28—Thousands of persons throughout the San Francisco Bay region heard sermons Sunday defending religion against inroads by atheism and paganism.

Church and synagogue and cathedral was hailed the plea of William Randolph Hearst for a union of churches to defend religion against the forces of intolerance.

Dr. Ralph E. Knudsen, of the Central Baptist Church, president of the San Francisco Church Federation—The church of today has a real chance to perform in a world dashing headlong toward the abyss of self-destruction. Political strategy alone will not solve the complex problem. There must be a new birth of confidence in one another as individuals and as nations if we are to survive."

Dr. Julian C. McPheters, Glide Memorial Church—Mr. Hearst is to be heartily commended for the editorial making a plea for a united front on the part of the major religious groups in America, against the anti-religious forces which have been rising with increasing momentum throughout the world."

"BUTCH" MacMULLIN

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 28—The brief and rocky marriage of K. Weston "Butch" MacMullin, former Central high school athletic hero, which culminated a school romance, was scheduled to be aired in Domestic Relations Court here today.

Mrs. Edythe MacMullen, 23-year-old wife, is seeking a divorce on grounds of non-support and a permanent allowance of $5 a week. The couple have one child, a boy, who is living with the mother.

While the one-time hockey, baseball and football high school star is not contesting the divorce action, he is scheduled to appear in court in objection of the $5 weekly payment. MacMullin claims that he can't pay that amount. He was ordered to pay he wife $5 a week while the case was pending.

Wife Appeals To See Mate Lashed

Warden Will Rule Today on Her Application

BALTIMORE, Feb. 28 (INS)—Clyde Miller, 37, will be strapped to Baltimore's century-old whipping post Tuesday morning and lashed 20 times with a cat-o'-nine-tails in the presence of only a "witness" jury of 12 men, accredited newspaper representatives, and two physicians.

Whether Miller's wife, Elizabeth, 33, will witness the lashing of her husband for beating her, will be decided by Warden Price of the city jail today when she makes formal application.

So severely beaten that one of her eyes still is closed, her lips so swollen she can hardly talk, Mrs. Miller repeated her desire to be permitted to see her husband lashed. Price will make his decision when she files her application.

Photographers, Price said, will be barred.

"We're not going to turn this into a Roman holiday," Price said. "This is a serious thing. Miller is going to be lashed as the law and the court directs. But it is a matter of justice, and not a show."

Only four times since the turn of the century has the colonial-type old whipping post been used in Maryland. At one—in 1928—scores, among them many women, witnessed the whipping of a man who, like Miller, had beaten his wife. The event aroused much adverse comment because of the presence of the women, who giggled and whispered as the lash was applied.

Bishop 'Busy' To Zog Sisters

Albanian Ex-Dictator Won't See Princesses

They may be the sisters of a king but Bishop Fan Noli, former Albanian dictator now living in Boston, said today he would be "too busy" to meet the Princesses Myzeijen, Ruhije and Moxhide of Albania on their approaching visit to this city.

The royal trio, all under 30 and unmarried, were due to arrive in New York today on the liner Conte Di Savoia.

Romantically-minded European politicians who see another reason for their tour, however, recall that not so long ago King Zog "shopped" around the continent in a vain attempt to find his three royal sisters some wealthy husbands.

to do with it. But in any event, we will not change."

Equally happy were the widowed mother, Mrs. Alice F. Munroe, 68, and the husband, Norman T. Halpin, Brown graduate in 1934 and a bookkeeper.

"She has been a fine girl and a very faithful daughter," said the mother. She has lived a good life, and has been the sole support of the house while we were by ourselves.

"Her friendships are few but when she makes a friend it is for a long time."

Halpin, grinning broadly, said: "Besides the fact that I think she is very beautiful, I also think she is very fortunate. We've known each other since high school days."

The bride herself shared credit for her success with her young husband, however, declaring they had worked the Human Problems out together and that he did as much as she.

OUTDOOR GIRL

Mrs. Halpin was born at North Smithfield, but the family moved to East Providence when she was 16. She was graduated from East Providence high school with the class of 1926. Then she took a one-year business course, working part time while she was still in school.

Now in her spare time she golfs, skates, skis, tobogganes, coasts, swims and likes outdoor sports generally. She also plays bridge, dances, is a good cook, likes housework and is an active member of a sewing club.

The second prize winner, Mohn, is now a patient in Chelsea Marine Hospital, not because of the slug he received in his right shoulder at Chateau Thierry with the Rainbow Division, but receiving treatment for an internal disorder.

This did not prevent him, however, from chortling joyfully when he heard the news.

He is a traveling salesman, is married and has two lovely daughters, Gloria, 16, and Peggy, 14, at present visiting friends in New Jersey. The Mohns moved to Malden from Portland, Me., a couple of years ago, but he and his wife, the former Miss Margaret Miller, are originally from Pennsylvania.

The third prize winner, Miss Moore, is 27 years old and blonde. She lives with her mother and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy, at the Needham address. McCarthy is a clerk in the Hyde Park post office.

Miss Moore, who now is on a short leave of absence from the drug firm where she works, is a graduate of East Boston high school and formerly lived in Adams street, Dorchester.

SUPPORTS 4 CHILDREN

Moran, winner of the fourth prize, was graduated from St. Joseph's high school, Manchester, N. H., and now is a clerk for the Manchester Street Railway Company. He is 33 years old and the father of four children, Louise F., John F. Jr., Mary V. and Richard Moran.

The fifth prize winner, Mrs. Scovell, said she has had a hard struggle to make a comfortable home for her four fatherless children, Priscilla, 16, Ann 8, Betty 7, and Muriel 4.

Her war veteran husband died 20 months ago, and the 38-year-old widow, brunette and petite—she weighs but 112 pounds—was left to raise the four girls in the little cottage two miles out of Newport, N. H.

But she has succeeded thus far, with some state aid, she said. Although she has tried in many contests she never before has won anything.

Thus ends one of the most successful contests ever conducted by the Boston Evening American, a contest which drew thousands of entries from all over New England.

It was a contest which had no tricks, no impossible-to-find clues and no conflicting conclusions in the solving of the Human Problems.

Beginning tomorrow, six solutions to the Human Problems will be published daily in the Boston Evening American and Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, until all 30 of the solutions have been printed—that contestants may compare their own answers.

To all who took part in this unique contest and to the estimable judges who selected the cash-prize winners these newspapers extend felicitations.

BOARD OF JUDGES

The board of judges were the following:

The Rev. Richard J. Quinlan, S. T. L., director of more than 150 parochial schools in the Boston archdiocese and one of the leading Catholic educators of the country.

Judge Emma Fell Schofield, associate justice of Malden district court and first woman to serve as an assistant attorney-general of Massachusetts. She is former president of the Boston branch, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Dr. Robert Chenault Givler, head of the department of psychology at Tufts College and author of several textbooks.

Professor Philip Justin Rulon, M.A., Ph.d., instructor of education at Harvard and also the author of several books.

Dr. John M. Harmon, professor of psychology in the department of education, Boston University, and director of athletics. He was one of the first in the country to receive a doctor's degree in physical education.

I'm in a daze! I don't think that I will change the course of my life, however!" was reaction of Mrs. Doris Munroe Halpin to news that she had won first prize of $15,000 in Boston American Human Problems Contest. She is shown here with her mother, Mrs. Alice Munroe, and husband, Norman Halpin.

Robert Mohn, 1111 Fellsway, Malden, who won second prize of $2500 in contest, receives felicitations of Nurse Evelyn Dahl at the Marine Hospital in Chelsea, where Mohn is a patient not because of the wound he received overseas, but for an internal disorder. Mohn is married, and has two daughters, Gloria, 16, and Peggy, 14. He is a traveling salesman, and hails originally from Pennsylvania.

Leslie Blake Finds Change In Boston Society in Decade

Sub-Deb Crop 'Sophisticated,' She Says; Compares 'Short Dress' of Yesteryear

(Miss Leslie Blake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blake of Dedham, has been requested to express her views of Boston Society. The first installment appeared in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. It will continue, daily, in the Boston Evening American. Miss Blake is a member of the Vincent Club and the Junior League, and is one of the most popular and attractive post-debutantes in Boston.)

CHAPTER II

I hardly expected to be writing my memoirs—at this stage in my life, anyway. And I would have supposed that they'd have little significance, except, perhaps, to myself.

But now I'm discovering that they prove one thing, at least. They prove that, in the space of a very few years, a great part of the picture of Boston society has changed immensely.

I can compare my own activities as a sub-deb with those of the present crop of 16-year-olds. And it's amazing how much more freedom and sophistication they've already acquired. And I'm wondering—where do we go from here?

BATTLE OF LIFE "TRAINING"

But there'll be more about that, later on in this series. For the time being, I think it might be fun to go back to our little-girl days and tell you something of our training and how we were equipped for the "battle of life." Of course we never suspected, and were never told, that it would be any kind of a battle at all.)

Lots of us were brought up with French governesses. As a matter of fact, it was often considered smart for tiny children to be taught French or German before they learned English.

I can't honestly say much for that idea, as this early linguistic attempt was rarely kept up, and by the time the child was five or six years old he'd forgotten every vestige of foreign language and expressed himself in sangy, little-boy American.

THE "FRENCH" IDEA

Remember the adjective "French" which used to be applied to our clothes?

Among the more frivolous mothers, there was considerable striving to out-do each other in regard to the length—or, rather, the shortness—of their children's dresses. The shorter the dress, the more "French" the idea. And it made the little girls' legs look like long, skinny sausages—which sometimes turned faintly blue.

One little girl at dancing class, went so far as to complain of being cold.

"Cold!" she was asked. "In a velvet dress?"

"Yes," came the replied. "There isn't any velvet to sit on."

STRUGGLE TO DRESS

To cover our long legs en route to dancing school, we were forced to wear ugly brown leather gaiters which buttoned all the way from the ankle up to mid-thigh. There were a source of constant agony—even tears. And what a painful struggle it was to get dressed for home, most of us sitting on the floor, pulling and straining and wielding buttonhooks in every direction.

It was customary for two sisters in a family to dress alike (as it is to this day). But the greatest outrage of all was when a little boy was made to dress like his two sisters.

I distinctly remember one such outfit. The little girls had dresses of Indian cotton with a border of fairly large elephants around the hem. Their brother had trousers (about the size of a pocket handkerchief) of the same material. And HIS elephant came exactly on the seat!

EDUCATION BEGINS

As for our education, it usually began at the age of three or four, when we were surrounded by a French governess or two and a governess. My older sister and I had private lessons at home until we attended the Fiewire School, named for the three lovely maiden ladies who ran it. It was situated in the middle of Dedham, and the ponies were, mostly, the sons and daughters of families like ours living in and around the town.

Most of us were escorted to and from school by nurse or governesses—which we resented acutely. One of my most vivid memories of those school days is the envy and admiration with all had for three of our young friends who were driven to school every day by a coachman in a cart, drawn by two tiny Shetland ponies.

"MIDGET, WIDGET"

The cart was dragged down in the back by the weight of its four occupants, but I always expected to see the ponies lifted off their feet at any moment. The names of the ponies were "Midget" and "Widget." And there was even a third one at home named "Flibbertigibbet."

There were five children in my family; all of us (at that time) less than ten years old. The three young ones lived up on the third floor with their nurse. And I seem to remember an unending procession of trays with their meals, going up and down on the dumbwaiter at all hours of the day and night.

Incidentally, a parrot, a canary and two ring doves lived up there, too. In this respect, our house was like that of all my young friends—full of children, nurses and pets.

SERENE DAYS

They were serene days, certainly—days which were spent doing the traditional thing; building a background which would be entirely "proper" in the cold, intolerant eyes of Boston Society.

I can't say that this particular society has become any more tolerant, at heart. And I don't think it ever will. But when you consider the antics of today's young people —perhaps those intolerant eyes have become less sharp.

State Board Asks Court Backing

Commissioner of Labor and Industry James T. Moriarty today advocated legislation authorizing the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration to seek court support for its decisions in labor disputes.

He spoke before the legislative committee on labor and industries on the proposal, which was opposed by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts. Representing the manufacturers' association, George L. Barnes told the committee:

"It would mean the end of voluntary arbitration of labor disputes in Massachusetts, I don't believe this method of compulsory arbitration is going to help solve labor disputes."

The commissioner, declaring that some firms refused to abide by the board's decisions, asserted that "the state should have some power to enforce what it believes to be an equitable finding."

The police revolver was clutched in his hand.

Sergeant Edmund McDonald of Brockton approached the house and pleaded with the boy to drop the revolver and come outside.

The boy fired two shots in reply, narrowly missing McDonald. The other policemen ran to cover behind automobiles and houses. Passersby, attracted to the scene by the presence of police, were warned to get off the street.

FIRE GAS SHELLS

While Sergeant McDonald still pleaded with the boy, from behind cover, the two state police officers and Patrolmen Wilmer O'Brien and John Ring crept around the house and into the cellar.

Reaching the first floor they fired one shell from the tear gas gun up the stairway.

As the gas filled the boy's room he rushed to the window and fired three more shots at the officers. The bullets went wild.

The state police in the house then hurled a tear gas grenade, and the boy, choking and coughing, came down the stairs. He offered no resistance to the police.

Baruch Lays Recession To Roosevelt Policies

ticularly the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes.

These taxes, he said, "practically arrest" the creation and expansion of new industries.

He said there is ample credit now to support much greater business activity than that of even 1929 and added:

"The single missing element in a great forward movement is a feeling of security—a belief that money can be spent or invested without confiscation of reasonable profits by inordinate taxation . . . arbitrary change in the value of money . . . further disturbing assaults on business.

"The combination of millions of caution, caused by doubts about the trend of government," he said, "has held back private spending.

"Of course," he said, "all this depends on national policy.

"If it remains what recently it has appeared to be, there is no hope of re-employment and substantial recovery."

HITS SOCIAL SECURITY

Baruch criticized the social security tax as tending to retard business and cause unemployment.

"In addition to deducting a tremendous sum from the direct purchasing power of the poorest classes," he said, "it serves as a powerful incentive to employers to replace workers with machines."

He suggested substitution of a gross sales tax or a machine hours levy.

Baruch said he believed that the national income should be 100 billions of dollars yearly, a goal discussed recently by President Roosevelt, instead of the present 50 billions.

"Certainly," he declared, "the real goal to shoot at in relieving the terrible problems of unemployment is that gap. Government expenditures of two and a half billion or even four billions for relief do not begin to cover the gap."

AGAINST WAGE BOARD

"As long as employment lags, we must spend for relief, but government expenditure isn't the way to cure unemployment. There is only one way to do that—full private expenditure for consumption and investment, in the normal proportions as between capital and consumers goods."

Although favoring wage-hour legislation, Baruch opposed establishment of a board to fix wages and hours, recommending that Congress set those limits with "reasonable differentials" to cover established production areas.

A board could be permitted to vary the rules to cover emergencies, he said.

Baruch made what some observers interpreted as an indirect jibe at the National Labor Relations Board, asserting that such a board

"should never regard itself as a pressure bureau for any particular union or form of unionism."

UNECONOMIC AREAS

Opponents of the board have accused it of bias in favor of the industrial unionism fostered by John L. Lewis' CIO.

At the outset of the hearing, Baruch read a prepared statement in which he said that in seeking to adjust the economic system to modern needs, "we have attempted too much too hastily."

He suggested the policing of "uneconomic areas" of business and added:

"In correcting 'uneconomic' areas and policing vast concentrations of economic power for maximum public service and minimum abuse we must preserve to the utmost individual initiative, individual freedom and in the least possible degree restrict opportunity for individual advancement.

"If it became clear tomorrow that America has definitely chosen her traditional profits system, forces would be released that would rapidly hasten recovery and re-employment."

Lewis Plans Test Of Candidates For Congress

Votes on 23 Measures To Be Used as Gauge Of Labor Support

WASHINGTON, Feb 28 (INS)—A definite program by John L. Lewis, powerful labor leader, and his CIO aides to seek control of Congress in the coming elections through a Farmer-Labor-Liberal alliance was disclosed today.

The program calls for support or rejection of senatorial and congressional candidates for renomination and re-election based upon their votes on 23 measures in the 75th Congress. The entire House of 435 members and one-third of the Senate will face this year.

Through Labor's Non-Partisan League, of which Lewis is president and Sidney Hillman, CIO official, is treasurer, all candidates have been notified of what they may expect in the way of labor support or opposition.

The measures chosen to test "fitness" of candidates plainly reveal the Farmer-Labor-Liberal alliance. The group has selected 11 Senate votes and 12 House votes on which to compile records of members.

Eliminating duplications, 14 tests are chosen. These tests, and the way the labor-said members should have voted, follow:

Farm measures—New crop control bill, for; tenancy bill and anthracite coal bill, yes; wage-hour bill, yes; low rent housing, yes; limit of unit cost, low rent housing—no.

Liberal measures—reduction relief appropriations, no; require local communities to share 25 per cent or 40 per cent of cost, no; naval appropriations bill, no; anti-lynching bill, yes; repeal 'Red rider' banning teaching about Communism in Washington schools, yes; repeal of corporation salary publicity, no.

The labor group opposed the big navy appropriations bill favored by Roosevelt. It also favored the reduction of railroad passenger interest rates, originally sponsored by Senator Wheeler (D.) of Montana, and vigorously opposed by Roosevelt.

42 Routed By Fire in East Boston

2 Alarms for Blaze; Captain Rescued When Overcome

A fire captain was overcome and 42 persons, including 35 eating lunch in a restaurant, were driven out by smoke today when a two-alarm fire swept a block of stores at Breed and Bennington streets, East Boston.

Captain Charles Fleming of Engine 11 was rescued by Patrolman Peter McHugh when he collapsed in a smoke-filled drug store on Bennington street. He was given first aid and revived at the scene.

The fire started in the fruit store of Frank Albrano on Breed street, according to police.

$35,000 DAMAGE

Cause of the blaze was not immediately determined and damage was estimated at $25,000.

Firemen were forced to don gas masks while battling the blaze in the spreading drug store because of the fumes from chemicals.

Driven from the drug store were Mrs. Katherine Catalino, 35, of Beach street, Revere, an employe; Angelo Trotti, 27, of Mansfield street, Everett, the pharmacist, and an unidentified coin box telephone collector.

Frank Ritti, proprietor of the restaurant, fled to the street as heavy smoke filled the place.

A manager of the adjoining chain store and three clerks were driven out. They were Patrick Murphy of Green alley, Charlestown; James Sea of Presley street, Malden, and Patrick Di Daro of Bennington street.

TRAFFIC REROUTED

Traffic on Bennington street was tied up for nearly an hour and then rerouted.

Earlier today proprietors of three stores were driven to the street when a fire broke out in a radio shop on Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, causing damage estimated at $4000.

A short circuit in the store, owned by Norman Brown, was given as the cause. Others driven out were Nar Mahon, proprietor of a hairdressing parlor, and Nicholas Francesachelli, owner of a shoe repair shop.

Ishbel Bridal Is Semi-Secret

Speen Handyman Wed To Miss MacDonald

LONDON, Feb. 28 (AP)—Ishbel MacDonald and her village handyman Ramsay Norman Bridges were married in semi-secrecy today at Hamstead town hall in London.

The wedding came two weeks after the announcement of Ishbel's engagement, which caused general surprise.

The wedding itself was celebrated quietly because of the recent death of the bride's father, former Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald.

U. S. Leadership Assailed by Glenn Frank

Charges U.S. Economic Machine Has Been Stalled 5 Years

CHICAGO, Feb. 28 (INS)—Dr Glenn Frank, chairman, opened the first meeting of the Republican party's national policy-making committee today with the assertion that five years of "federal authority over enterprise has stalled the nation's economic machine."

Calling the committee to assist in remedying the ills from which the country suffers, Dr. Frank in his keynote speech said:

"About the same number of millions of workless men and women haunt the councils of statesmanship as haunted them five years ago.

"We have seen a paralyzing uncertainty slow down the nation's enterprise just when, by every count, it was geared to go.

"In theory, the national leadership has been planning. In practice, it has been playing by ear, with increasing signs of not knowing, with assurance, what the tune should be."

CRITICALLY IMPORTANT

He outlined the task confronting the Republican policy makers succinctly:

"We are not a brain trust. We are neither a group of yes-men to the national committee, nor a body of cloistered experts whose ideals have never been chastened by the discipline of practical experience.

"We are not here to prosecute a campaign of petty and vindictive fault-finding. But . . . if, as becomes daily more evident, many of the policies of the national administration have tragically failed to produce the results intended, . . . Then it is critically important that the national mind be clarified respecting them."

Super 'Air Forts' Seen by Martin

China Clipper Builder Tells House Board Monster Bombers Practical

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Super "flying fortresses" capable of carrying 64,000 pounds in bombs at 380 miles an hour were envisioned before the House Naval Affairs Committee today by Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore designer and manufacturer of the China Clipper planes.

The huge plane, four times the size of any bomber ever built, would have a wing spread of 300 feet, carry a crew of 30, cruise at 25,000 feet altitude, with a flying range of 3000 to 11,000 miles, depending on the bomb load, he said.

The ship would weigh 250,000 pounds.

PLANT READY FOR TASK

But, he added, his own firm in Baltimore recently made a $2,000,000 extension in its plant facilities to gain an area equal to "15 football fields" to meet the possibility that some day such planes will be built.

"There is apparently no limit to the size that planes can attain," he declared, "I wouldn't advise a 250,000-pound ship without building in the intermediate steps first."

He then disclosed that he had complete designs for a 118,000-pound and a 70,000-pound bomber, both larger than any bomber built thus far.

BACKS AIR MINE TRYOUT

The 70,000-pound planes would have a flying range of 3000 to 6000 miles, carrying from 4000 to 14,000 pounds in bombs, and a cruising speed of 300 miles per hour.

Martin told the committee that the government should try out immediately a new "aerial mine" which its inventor claims will revolutionize aerial warfare.

Representative Church (R.) of Illinois recalled that Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, had testified such a mine might render parts of a fleet inoperative. The weapon was invented by Lester P. Barlow of Stamford, Ct., a pioneer in aerial bombardment.

"I'd give Barlow's device serious consideration," Martin said. "If it is successful, it will be pretty serious. It ought to have an immediate trial."

BELIEVES IN NAVY

Questioned by members regarding the expansion program, Martin said he believed in a "strong navy."

"While I am convinced there is a great future in aviation, I do not think we should abandon battleships until we have produced more facts concerning air attack," he declared.

"Under present circumstances, things are too problematical to depend solely on planes—we must have a fleet."

The possibility that aircraft will eventually supplant land and sea forces is "still a theory," he added.

The Senate Naval Affairs committee will "insist" that military experts determine whether air planes are capable of destroying battleships, Chairman Walsh (D.) of Massachusetts said today.

The experts will be called upon for full information on the controversial subject when the naval expansion bill, now before the House Naval Affairs committee, is taken up by the Senate committee, Walsh said.

"The Naval Affairs committee will insist that the question of effectiveness of air bombers on battleships be cleared up," he added. "It is time that we have definite and positive knowledge.

"Personally, I believe the navy will be able to make a good case for battleships. The battleship is like a fort, but we need them mainly because the other fellow has them."

TWO MORE HELD

And in spite of the strict censorship, it became known today that in an upstairs room in a midtown hotel two more suspects have been cornered by Department of Justice men, are being detained in technical custody, and are trying to talk their way out of a net of questions thrown over them.

A startling excerpt from a letter which was read before a congressional immigration committee on Nov. 14, 1933, indicates that plans for insinuating agents into this country matured more than five years back. It said in part:

"Send us a young lady of good appearance . . . She should come over on the Europa or the Bremen as a hairdresser . . . We will send another person back on the ship, thus evading the immigration authorities and avoiding a checkup by Untermeyer. (Ed. Note: The Untermeyer named apparently referred to Samuel Untermeyer, enemy of foreign propagandists in this country.)

Johanna Hofmann, arrested last Friday on the Europa with incriminating codes and documents on her person, fulfilled every detail of those five-year-old instructions. She was startlingly attractive, with copper-colored hair. She was on the Europa. She was employed as a hairdresser.

Captain William Dreschel, marine superintendent of the Hamburg-American Line, said that Fraulein Hofmann was 28 years old, was unmarried, and when not sailing the Atlantic lived with her parents in Dresden.

He was shocked by her arrest, and revealed she had worked aboard the Europa for about a year as one of the two hairdressers for first class passengers.

While authorities definitely stated that the spy investigation has no link with the current probe of the amazing Robinson-Rubens fraudulent passport case, it was learned today that ramifications of this most recent plot stretch over the country and reach right to the nation's capital.

HOSTESS WATCHED

It was learned that a foreign-born hostess, famous for her discreet parties and quiet entertainments in Washington's "cocktail set," is being watched by secret service agents who know that her apartment has from time to time served as headquarters for attaches of a certain foreign embassy.

Dozens of persons have been secretly questioned, and one New York doctor with a marked and publicly announced distaste for Hitlerism is under surveillance after questioning.

The swift, sudden censorship is due to the fact that G-men are afraid the curtain went up prematurely, and that other agents in the plot to supply a foreign power with information on United States coast defenses, anti-aircraft defenses, the Panama canal and the two new aircraft carriers now under construction for the navy, warned by the arrest of the three, have taken to their burrows and hat he ringleader is already in flight out of the country.

FAIL TO NAME TOWER

While the P. B. I. has refrained from naming the foreign power or powers so implicated in the military and naval secrets of the United States at this time, it is regarded as more than coincidental that the confessed spies arrested are either German, or of German names and extraction.

Many American communities, notably Buffalo and Indianapolis, are beginning to take independent action on Nazi activity as typified by the German-American Bund and its admitted attempts to organize German-Americans in this country in sufficient numbers to become a political power.

Five Held as Gas Station Thieves

Five Roxbury youths were held in bail totalling $23,000 by Judge Frankland W. L. Miles in Roxbury Court today in connection with three filling station breaks in the past two weeks.

James Bushingham, 16, of Hammond street, Roxbury, and a 15-year-old youth were held in $10,000 each after they pleaded not guilty to charges of breaking and entering.

Emmanuel Dorean, 21, of Washington street, Roxbury, was held in $2000 on a similar charge. He also pleaded not guilty.

Henry Schermerhorn, 21, of Washington street, and Rocco Capuzzo, 32, of Ray street, both Roxbury, were held in $500 each after they pleaded not guilty to charges of receiving stolen goods. All cases were continued to March 3.

Troops Encircle Graz as Nazi Revolt Wilts

VIENNA, Feb. 28—With tanks, artillery, troops and planes ringing the city of Graz where an incipient Nazi uprising was nipped, Austrian government officials today feared counter-demonstrations by Fatherland Front, Socialists and Communists today.

Their bold scheme to seize control of Graz and then march on Vienna halted by the ring of steel Nazi leaders said today that a "two day armistice" had been arranged with the government.

During the "armistice" period, Nazi leaders said, they would negotiate for more freedom of action.

Vienna officials refused to discuss the assertion.

From Berlin came word that German leaders had declared that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg was fast losing his grip.

They pointed out that since Schuschnigg found it necessary to send troops to Graz in southern Austria, rather than northward to the German border—"His difficulties originate at home, not in Berlin."

At the same time the Berlin press criticized socialist and communist disorders rather than those of Nazis. Hitler's own newspaper accused Russia of fomenting the Austrian strife and hinted that the Fuehrer would brook no Soviet interference.

General Johnson Says:

IMPERTINENT ROLE

Professor President

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

HOBCAW, S. C., Feb. 28—Professor President with a pointer and an easel full of charts criticizing American business on good business judgment, through a press conference, with associate professors Henry the Morgue and Henry the Fowler—I mean Farmer—sitting owlishly by, is only out-distanced in sheer impertinence by Adolf Hitler's lecture to the world.

Hugh S. Johnson

Here were three separate and distinct business failures underwriting the silliest economic nonsense yet advanced.

With the main thesis, nobody will disagree. It is true that it is not high prices or low prices that make distress. It is unbalanced prices. As this column has insisted since its beginning, the outstanding circumstance of both booms and busts is that great price groups do not go up and down together and the producers in the laggard price brackets lose their purchasing power.

But to compare the "sensitive" price group with the more stable price group, call the latter monopolists, and berate its producers for not lowering the prices of iron and steel, for example, to the level of farm prices, for instance, is abysmal ignorance.

Factors controlling price in no two groups are the same. Where the major element of cost is fixed, as it is where factory overhead is high and labor and material costs are a relatively small element of price, prices are more stable because increased volume, due to lower costs, does not compensate for profitless prices.

This is especially true in the iron and steel industry. Where goods are sold in a world auction market, like wheat and cotton, nothing that either the industry or government can do can control them.

* * *

The simplest industry to manage is automobiles. There, increased production is so great a factor in reducing costs that prices, per pound of product, are incredibly low. That rule applies with only fractional effect in agricultural implements where an immense diversity of product so restricts the advantages of mass-production that you cannot measure the two industries by the same yardstick.

The labor cost in a package of cigarettes is ridiculously low—as I recall, about one mill. In such an industry there is no excuse at all for cutting wages to lower price. But in other industries where the labor element of cost runs as high as 80 per cent and most of the remainder cost is a fixed charge for plant investment, it is simply impossible to lower price without cutting wages.

There are some industries where increased production by lowering prices is the way to profits. There are others where it is impossible nonsense. The President asked for lower prices without cutting wages.

John Lewis started out by being a labor economist. He knows his onions better. In fact, he knows so much more about the bituminous coal industry than many of its managers, that I used to feel sorry for them in some joint conferences. In

N. E. Army, Navy Bases Guarded In Spy Plot

Heavy guards today patrolled New England naval and military points as G-men continued their drive to round up over a score more members of an international spy ring.

At Fore River yard in Quincy, mentioned in the confessions of the trio now held as leaders of the alleged espionage plot, special police were ordered to take extra precautions with all visitors.

Suspected are Johanna Hoffman, 28, charged with sale of American war secrets; Gunther G. Rumrich, who police say tried to obtain false passports, and Erich Glauser, army private at Mitchell Field, N. J.

Harry E. D. Gould, general manager at Fore River, stated that extraordinary measures are being taken to protect the secret in the construction of the Wasp, most modern of all airplane carriers.

Naval officials revealed today that for several months spy activities have been suspected and special guards have been stationed at Fore River, Charlestown Navy Yard and Portsmouth, N. H.

Marine guards turn away all unauthorized visitors at Charlestown, where two destroyers are nearing completion. Latest type submarines, the new "S" model, are guarded at Portsmouth and New London, Conn.

With revelation that air secrets were a major objective of the spy organization, local officials today recalled that Lieutenant Commander Michael H. Kernodle devised unusual safeguards when he took charge of the Naval Reserve Air Station at Squantum last spring.

Mobilizing Bill Stirs Jap Row

TOKYO, Feb. 28 (AP)—The government's dictatorial national mobilization bill precipitated a new uproar in a lower House sub-committee today.

Irked because Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye failed to attend the session at which they vented their spleen in this controversial bill, committeemen shouted, stamped their feet and finally recessed.

In another quarter, a leading Japanese naval authority asserted today that "America is unable to have anything like confidence in her navy's ability to cope with Japan," because Japan has defeated the United States in naval building.

Annual Defense Costs To Reach $1,200,000,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—The nation's annual defense bill, informed officials forecast today, will mount inevitably in the next decade to $1,200,000,000 or more.

This would be double the $617,214,000 allotted in 1923, when the Washington arms limitation treaty's first was effected, and would as well under the $1,744,000,000 spent in post-war 1920.

Exclusive of the increases which President Roosevelt has recommended, prospective outlays for the Army and Navy this year aggregate about $1,000,000,000.

FLEET TONNAGE BIG ITEM

The chief factor in the future calculations is the $1,156,000,000 officially estimated as the cost of increasing the fleet's tonnage 20 per cent and augmenting the naval aviation force by 960 planes.

It would be prorated over the six or eight years in which the House Naval committee has been told would be required to complete the program.

Other factors include increased cost of manning, repairing and fueling a larger fleet, and $18,000,000 for army anti-aircraft guns, ammunition and other purposes.

The navy figures it ultimately will need 20,000 or more sailors —in addition to the present 105,000 enlisted men—for the recommended 47 warships, 22 auxiliaries and 1000 planes.

STILL BEHIND WORLD

Prospects are that the defense bill will increase gradually. The first added outlays logically would be for shipbuilding facilities.

They pointed out that since Schuschnigg found it necessary to send troops to Graz in southern Austria, rather than northward to the German border—"His difficulties originate at home, not in Berlin."

Since the United States is a late entry in the world armaments race, the projected increases are expected to leave the strength of the army and navy at its present relation to the forces of other nations.

As for the army, Secretary Woodring said in his annual report that despite advances in mechanization and efficiency, it was "relatively weaker, compared with the armies of the other great countries, than it was a year ago."

Japan Warships Attack British

SHANGHAI, Feb. 28 (INS)—Japanese warships attacked a British Imperial Airways flying boat south of Hongkong Friday, passengers aboard the plane revealed today.

The aircraft was flying from Bangkok, Siam, to Hongkong on the regular weekly run with passengers and mail when the attack occurred, it was stated.

The plane was clearly marked with British flags, passengers said.

According to the passengers, the plane was following its regular route when it passed over a group of Japanese warships, believed to have been destroyers.

As the plane soared past, they said, machine gun bullets and anti-aircraft shells fired by the ships whizzed past—but failed to hit the plane.

Mussolini Asks Britain To Halt New Attacks

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service
Staff Correspondent
Copyright, 1938

LONDON, Feb. 28—While critics harried Premier Minister Neville Chamberlain with a demand for a general election, Premier Mussolini directly entered Britain's turbulent political scene today with a "request" that British newspapers cease their attacks on him.

Il Duce asked the British government to "call off" the newspapers which have been campaigning against him in connection with Anthony Eden's resignation as foreign secretary and the decision of Chamberlain to bargain with Italy and Germany for peace.

Mussolini, International News Service learned, complained that attacks against him by London's Liberal and Left-Wing press ensnared the favorable atmosphere he considered essential for conclusion of any Anglo-Italian understanding.

DUCE SENSITIVE

The request was made through London's ambassador to Rome, Lord Perth, who informed Chamberlain that Il Duce is sensitive to the attacks levelled against him by British newspapers, and regards their curtailment as of the greatest importance.

There were indications that Whitehall would appeal to the newspapers to exercise restraint in dealing with Il Duce pending commencement of the London-Rome talks, which are to begin this week.

In connection with the conversations, a questioner confronted Chamberlain in the House of Commons this afternoon with the report that Italy had requested a share in defense of the Suez Canal.

The premier denied it flatly. That question will not form a part of the Anglo-Italian discussions, he said.

LABOR PARTY DRIVE ON

Meanwhile the Labor party, bitterly opposed to Chamberlain's program, launched a nationwide "peace campaign," and circulated an illustrated magazine urging support of "collective security"—the system whereby the League of Nations sought to preserve European peace.

Simultaneously, Chamberlain was confronted with increasing demands for a general election to test Britain's new foreign "bargaining" policy.

Foreign Agents Serving On U. S. Merchant Ships

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (INS)—Evidence of widespread espionage activities by foreign secret agents serving aboard American merchant vessels has been gathered by Senate investigators.

Senator Copeland (D.) of New York, revealed today that information in his possession indicated several leading European powers had placed spies among the rank and file of American seamen.

This disclosure was made as a high Justice Department official intimated the government is "greatly concerned" over increased espionage activities.

It would not be surprised if the arrests in New York on Saturday will touch off the most extensive anti-espionage drive in peacetime history," he asserted.

Aware of the large scale operations of foreign spies in this country, the War Department recently acted to guard many of the national defense establishments from prying eyes. Regulations were tightened to prevent photographing strategic military bases.

At the same time American naval officers told Congress that the government's counter-espionage program has been handicapped by lack of funds.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison has urged the House Naval Affairs committee to provide the navy intelligence unit with more money, so the United States can obtain "more accurate information about not only Japan, but every other nation."

Discussing espionage aboard American commercial vessels, Senator Copeland said,

"We have definite evidence of spy activities aboard our merchant vessels. For obvious reasons, I cannot reveal at this time the nations employing these individuals."

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 28—Joan Crawford has begged to be excused from playing in "Shopworn Angel" because she feels the character is unsuited to her. So M-G-M will probably replace her with Virginia Bruce who is being groomed for definite stardom.

Joan told the Metro executives that she didn't want to be arbitrary but she felt the old Nancy Carroll movie was not right for her just now when she needs a smash hit. From another source I hear that La Crawford feels mistakes are unlucky after "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney."

The moment Jimmy Stewart finishes the male lead in "Shopworn Angel" he moves to Columbia for "You Can't Take It With You," the Frank Capra picture.

Jack Warner tells me that his company is going in for virile outdoor adventure stories in a big way because that's what Mr. and Mrs. John Public enjoy most. "Gold In Where You Fino It," "Wells Fargo" and others of this type prove that action stories are vying with slapstick comedy in popularity. In the imposing line up of romantic adventure dramas is a remake of "The Great Divide," popular stage play and silent movie.

"Kit Carson," starring Wayne Morris, George Brent in "The Valley of the Giants," a remake of Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk" with Errol Flynn in the top spot, and last but not least "Dodge City," an epic based on the establishment of the southwest frontier town in America, are all on the 1938-9 Warner schedule.

The deathless legend of Mrs. O'Leary's cow that kicked the lantern that set fire to the straw that burned the barn that started the historic Chicago fire is vividly represented in "In Old Chicago."

On the same program, "Dynamite Delaney," story of a prize-fighter who becomes a state trooper, co-stars Weldon Heyburn and Eve Farrell.

Betty Alden on Beacon Hill

'Village Within Boston' Topic At 'Hillbillies' Meeting

By BETTY ALDEN

BOSTON'S OWN COUNTERPART of the famous leaning tower of Pisa, comes up for discussion at almost every annual meeting of the Beacon Hill Association . . . which is an organization of prominent Beacon Hillbillies and land owners who think of the Hill as a unique little village within a city . . . and the purpose of their meetings is to discuss ways and means of keeping the "village" an enjoyable place in which to live . . .

At the association's meeting the other evening in the Twentieth Century Club on Joy street, Romney Spring, the president, was asked if it is safe to walk under the tower of the little brick church at Charles and Mt. Vernon streets . . . or whether it would be wiser to walk around it . . . for this tower tips so noticeably that humorists often call in the "leaning tower of Beacon Hill" . . .

Mr. Spring explained that, though the steeple actually does tip a bit off the true perpendicular, it has been braced and rebuilt so there is no danger of it toppling over . . .

Hill dwellers are also interested in the old blue-faced clock which, from its position half way up the tower, has watched the Charles street traffic Mary Louise Spaulding change from carriages and an occasional horse-drawn street car to the present day stream of motor vehicles . . .

When asked how long the old clock might be expected to keep running, Mr. Spring smilingly replied he had been assured that it would run until the tower fell! . . .

From the leaning tower discussion at the meeting swung to Beacon Hill policemen . . . who no longer lean against lamp-posts, but are constantly on patrol . . . Captain William Donovan of the Joy street station discussed the various methods of protection which keep the hill safe . . . and as a dramatic illustration he asked Ralph Gray to call the station and say an officer was needed at the Twentieth Century Club right away . . . According to the members who pulled out their watches and kept time on the demonstration, the policeman arrived in a minute and a half . . .

Many Hill Boosters Attend

AMONG THE PROPERTY OWNERS who were present to show their interest in the Hill by suggesting improvements, etc., were Ralph Gray, well known painter of landscapes, who attended with Mrs. Gray . . . the Gray's residence is at 7 Mt. Vernon place . . . Walter Kilhan, prominent architect, whose West Cedar street home is the rendezvous of Boston's elite every Christmas eve, was also present as were Mrs. William Stanley Parker, former president of the Women's City Club, Mrs. Herbert Tucker, Mrs. Charles Townsend and Mr. Dwight Rudd . . .

Mrs. Arthur Shurcliffe, whose husband planned the landscaping of the beautiful Charles River Embankment, has contributed her share toward making the Beacon Hill locality a unique little community . . . She has revived the old art of bell ringing and leads a small group of musicians who wander over the Hill on Christmas Eve serenading the residents with old Christmas carols . . . The Shurcliffes live on Mt. Vernon street, not far from the picturesque little house owned by Miss Christine Woollett . . . Miss Woollett's residence was formerly the home of Percival Lombard, who left Boston about twenty years ago to found the Flagstaff observatory in Arizona for the study of planets . . . Beacon Hillers remember with appreciation the many times Miss Woollett and her mother, Mrs. Sydney Woollett, have opened their home for the benefit of the Massachusetts Division of the Blind, as well as the aristocratic little gatherings of their Beacon Hill neighbors where men prominent in arts and letters have been guests of honor . . .

* * *

Mrs. Perkins Davis of St. Paul has been here visiting her sister, Mrs. Follen Cabot of River street . . . Theirs is another aristocratic family steeped in New England tradition . . . their grandfather Ladd owned the treasured Ladd House in Portsmouth which is now an historical landmark maintained by the Colonial Dames . . .

Peggy Hardwick Catches Bridal Bouquet

POLLY WARDWELL carried a prayer book at her wedding Saturday, rather than the usual bridal bouquet, yet she didn't deprive her attendants of the exciting moments which climax every wedding reception . . . She had a gardenia bouquet waiting for her at home and when the formalities of the reception were over she ran up the stairs and tossed it down to the waiting bridesmaids . . .

Pretty Peggy Hardwick had the best luck, or the longest reach, for she caught the bouquet, which carries with it the old tradition that she will be the next bride . . .

Mary Porter Wardwell, the maid of honor, who is so tiny that she played the part of an infant in last year's Vincent Club show, didn't have a chance when all the hands were stretched upward to catch the falling bouquet . . . but the idea of tossing bouquets around immediately appealed to her seven-year-old sister Ann, who had served as flower girl . . . As soon as the bride had retired to her room to change into her going away suit Ann scampered up the stairs and imitated her by . . . for Sunday was Molly's birthday and her friends were johnny-

Polly's beautiful veil was the cynosure of all eyes and it was discovered to be a rare piece of lace which her grandmother, Mrs. Walter Garritt, had had made in Belgium for all her granddaughters to wear on their wedding day . . . Polly was the first to wear it . . .

Polly and her bridegroom, Chauncey Hutchins, are now en route to Jamaica, and will probably return to Brookline for a brief visit before going on to their new home in Lake Forest, just outside of Chicago . . .

* * *

"Happy Birthday to You" was the theme song at the small dinner party which Mary Louise Spaulding gave Saturday evening for Mrs. Le Baron Sands Willard, Jr., of West Cedar street . . . for Sunda was Molly's birthday and her friends were johnny-on-the-spot with pre-birthday wishes . . . The party took place at the Beacon street home of her mother, Mrs. Bartlett Harwood . . .

Romance

Miss Kidder Finds Love in Guatemala

News of a romance which had its beginnings in the picturesque ruins of the old Indian civilizations of Central America, was made known to Bostonians today, when Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vincent Kidder of "The Red House" in Beverly Farms, announced the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Kidder, to Willi Buse of Guatemala City, Central America.

Mr. Kidder is head of the division of historical research of the Carnegie Foundation, and Miss Kidder has accompanied her father on several expeditions to the archaeological excavations in Central America. She is at present with her parents in Guatemala.

Mrs. Bryon Tosi Hostess At Fete for B. C. Ushers

Mrs. Byron G. Tosi's "Night at Monte Carlo," Saturday evening at her Dorchester home was the welcome relief to Junior Philomatheians who had spent the last six days ushering at Boston College's 75th anniversary events.

The evening was an ingenuous one with Mrs. Tosi, the former Palmyra Albre, the night's gracious hostess. Her mink-collared lame gown, a souvenir of her European wedding trip, was very effective with her brunette coloring.

Angela and Mary Albre, who will be Pat's assistants with arrangements for the annual penny sale on March 21, were on hand to assist with the hostessing duties. Angela's raspberry chiffon was topped with matching jacket, while Mary's black taffeta bouffant frock was offset with clusters of yellow roses.

Mrs. Lorenzo Albre pinned a nosegay of fuchsia flowers to sheer black, while Josephine, another member of the Albre family, preferred a frock of blue lace.

Quite unusual was Emily Coolins' gown of black velvet, it's peplum completely edged with gardenias while Mary Coogan and Billie Chisholm were smart in black crepe.

Ruth Harrington tucked some gay posies in her coiffure to offset her mulberry velvet. She's leaving tomorrow for the remainder of the week in Manchester, Vt., where she'll visit Marie La Fleur, who's now Mrs. Lud Gordon. Catherine Readon was another one of the evening's interested participants. Her sapphire velvet had full brocaded sleeves.

Others engrossed in either the games of chance or in watching themselves flicker in the moving pictures of last June's wedding, were Frances Rattigan, Marjorie Paxton, leaf green and brocade fashioning her dinner dress, Mary Snyder and Helen Warren whose royal blue crepe sported tiny ermine tails.

Chatty Notes Of Society

MRS. ALBERT C. BURRAGE of Commonwealth avenue is spending a few days in New York City where she is stopping at the Ritz-Carlton.

* * *

MRS. GEORGE S. PRYDE, the former Florence Mills, sailed aboard the Sythia, yesterday afternoon. She has been visiting her mother, Mrs. A. E. Mills in Brookline, and is now returning to Lauderdale, Scotland, where her husband, George S. Pryde, is a professor in a Scottish university.

* * *

MRS. JAMES J. STORROW, Mrs. George Thatcher and Mrs. Wendell Baker are among the prominent Bostonians who are vacationing in Bermuda and working on one of the committees for the annual Lady Cubitt Birthday Ball to be held at the Princess Hotel tomorrow (March 1) evening. Lieut.-General Sir Reginald Hildyard, governor of Bermuda, and Lady Hildyard, head the sponsors for this charity affair. The Lady Cubitt Fund is similar to Boston's Community Federation Fund.

* * *

RUTH WEYBURN, sub-debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Weyburn of Prides Crossing, had a brief week-end vacation from the Marstans school and was the guest of Mrs. William Browne Hale and her daughter, Mary Hale, in New York. Mrs. Hale entertained for her at a small dinner party at the St. Regis hotel Saturday evening.

Cambridge Man Takes Bride

Miss Elizabeth Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Jones of Wethersfield, Ct., became the bride of Russell Gordon Jones of Cambridge and Rockport at a simple wedding in Hartford, Ct., Saturday afternoon.

The Very Rev. Walter H. Gray, dean of Christ Church Cathedral in Hartford, and Rev. Dr. Samuel R. Colladay performed the ceremony in Christ Church Cathedral. Miss Ruth Lyons Jones was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant, and Lorrin E. Woodman of Cambridge was the best man.

Jerry Explains Brad's Absence At Showdown

CHAPTER 48

"Yes," said Mickey, "I'd liked to say much obliged to Talton, too. It strikes me he acted pretty regular."

Jerry was studying Sheila's eager, anxious face. Well, he'd realized it when he asked for help—that he was taking a chance of making her like Brad better.

"Talton's all right, Sheila," he said. "There were two reasons he didn't go to Mornick's with Vince and me. One was I didn't want him; it wasn't his funeral. And there was some kind of message waiting for him at the airport . . . I was too busy to ask him what it was, but it seemed to upset him a lot . . . I think I know now what it was. Read this." He handed Sheila an early edition of the Boston Evening American.

Following his directing finger, she read:

"Jap Bomb Maims Boston Woman — Socialite Mrs. E. Tucker Wendell in Shanghai Hospital — State Department Protests to Tokyo" . . .

Sheila looked up in dismay.

"But that's terrible!" she exclaimed. "Why, that's Brad's sister! He's crazy about her. Oh, I feel so sorry for him!"

She turned back to the story, seeking further details, yet almost afraid to read them. She was relieved to find it was expected Trudy Wendell would live—though she'd been severely injured by an air bomb striking a Chinese refugee center, filled with women and children.

"But what was she doing in China?" asked Patsy, wonderingly.

"Brad told me," said Sheila. "It seems her husband and his family about supported some kind of a missionary school in Shanghai. They were afraid it would be bombed because it was in the Chinese section of the city. So Mr. Wendell went over to ask the Japanese to leave it alone. You see, he's got some kind of a pull in Washington. And, of course, Trudy went along! Oh, dear, I wish there were something I could do . . . Why didn't you tell me before, Jerry?"

"I just got the paper on the way over from the plant," said Jerry. "I didn't realize she was Talton's sister at first. Then I remembered you'd mentioned her, and I knew why Talton was disturbed."

"I'm going to call him up," said Sheila. "This afternoon."

"I think you should," agreed her mother. "It's an awful thing the way they're killing women and children over there. Even if they are heathen. Were there many others hurt? Let me see that paper!"

She read the account of the bombing as Trudy called Brad's house from Jerry's desk phone. One other American woman—a nurse—badly hurt. Ten Chinese women and fifteen Chinese children killed outright.

Close to a hundred torn, shattered, burned, not quite killed. Another slaughter of innocents, like so many others reported, day after day, from China and Spain. Most of them more ghastly. Death coming down from the skies, callous and brutal; singling out the young, the defenseless, the weak. Blinding, torturing, burning. With a special preference for babies.

Like nearly everyone else, Ma Kelly had been reading about such things every day, but this particular incident brought the truth home. It was something that was happening to real people, not just to vague shadows across the seas.

"I'd like to get my hands on one of those bomb-throwers!" said she. "I'd——"

"You'd what, Mom?" asked Mickey.

Then they all laughed. Because they knew Mom was incapable of hurting anyone—very much like mothers everywhere, Spanish and Chinese mothers included.

"Yes," said Sheila, "Mr. Bradford Talton . . . I see . . . Will you tell him Sheila Kelly called? . . . And ask him to call me."

"I hope he calls," she sighed.

"When he does," rumbled Barney Kelly, "tell him I'd like to meet him."

Jerry said nothing.

VINCE BARTON paced along Columbia Road, South Boston, near City Point, watching the waves as they piled in on the ice-strewn beach.

He'd been walking for hours—ever since the police got through taking his statement. He hadn't slept. It seemed to him he would never sleep again.

He looked at the gray, foam-flecked water, surging heavily under the cold breath of a nor'easter, and thought desperately:

"That's where I belong. There's no use kidding myself. I'm a sap and a quitter. I won't ever be anything else. It will be better for everybody if I just step in and walk on out till a wave knocks me over. It won't take but one wave, because I can't even swim."

He'd felt Jerry's contempt. He'd felt the contempt of the officers, who made no effort to disguise their scorn of his gullibility.

That ruse of Jerry's—that lie about little Timmy—had affected Vince Barton deeply.

It had made him see himself as he was. His son might have died a dozen times, he realized, without his ever knowing the difference.

"It doesn't make any difference what I say," he thought. "It doesn't make any difference what I decide to do. That won't stay with it. I'm just naturally wrong!"

He thought of Del. In his way, he loved her.

More than he'd ever loved any woman, except perhaps his mother. That strange, silent woman who'd gone on hating Del, even in death. And he loved Timmy. But he couldn't do them any good.

They'd be better off without him.

All night, he'd been trying to get up courage to face them. Courage to talk to them once again at least. But he'd failed.

He found an opening in the guard-rail, walked down across the hard, wet sand to the water's edge.

The sun was just struggling up over a deep bank of lowlying fog, mysterious and threatening. Dark as eternity. Vince drew a deep breath . . . turned to look back once more. The only lit lights on Ninth Street . . . Del and Timmy were back there, only a little way off . . . If he only had the courage . . .

The sun cut a path across the water, touched the spire of a church . . . radiant and golden . . . almost.

Vince drew a short, deep, painful breath. He knew that church spire . . . It was Del's church—the church in which they'd been married.

He hadn't thought much about it then; his main idea had been to please her. But it seemed now that the finger of the sun was pointing something out to him.

As he stared, wondering, he remembered that moment, not so many hours before, when he'd prayed for help merely for a chance to live long enough to square himself.

And the strange part of it was that the help had come . . . Out of the sky, suddenly and amazingly.

Thinking that over, Vince Barton all at once was afraid to go on with what he'd been about to do. Not afraid of drowning. Not afraid of death. But afraid just the same.

He suddenly began to run—in the direction indicated by the shaft of sunlight . . . And, a little later, he knocked on the door of the Ninth Street house . . . It wouldn't do any good, he knew . . . Del would never give him another chance . . . But he could at least tell her what was in his mind. He could say, as he meant to say:

"Del, I've got some sense at last. I know what a sap I've been. And I'm going to map out of it—once and for all."

Not so much, but the point was he meant it—as he'd never meant anything in his life before.

"Del," he began. But he got no further. Her arms were around his neck.

"Vince darling!" "You've come home! I knew you would! Oh, I'm so proud of you. Jerry told me about it—how you licked those two men! Timmy! Here's your daddy!—Won't Timmy be proud of you?"

Vince Barton straightened his thin shoulders.

"It's a lie, honey," he said, with an effort. "Jerry's a good sport, but that's not what happened . . . I ran . . . That was all. I was a sucker for a lot of cheap crooks. That's the truth."

He expected her to draw away from him then. But her arms only clutched him tighter.

"Vince," she said, her lips against his cheek. "I'd rather —hear you say that than that you'd licked an army. Kiss me, husband."

And, mysteriously, they both knew everything was going to be all right. Vince for reasons he didn't quite apprehend yet. Del because she was gratefully aware that something important had happened to him—that he wasn't a phony pretender any more—that he was again the man she'd married. He'd always be weak, and bear watching, but she could stand that. As long as he didn't try to fool himself and her.

Then little Timmy was racing down the stairs, throwing his small arms about his father's legs, and crying,

"Daddy, daddy!"

That was something to think about, too.

IT wasn't so easy to convince Barney Kelly of his son-in-law's regeneration but, after considerable persuasion, he was willing to concede there might be a chance.

As a matter of fact, Barney was so overjoyed at Mickey's vindication that he was inclined to look kindly on all the world. Except that small portion of the world which held Big Gus Mornick. So small that the racket boss complained about it daily. Only to be told that the architect of the Charles Street jail had built the cells that way, and he'd have to get used to them. At least until he was ready to move to Charlestown Prison. Where, Barney joined the authorities in hoping, he would be provided with ampler quarters in the Cherry Hill section, adjacent to the death chamber.

This devout wish of the former detective, peculiarly, was silently, mildly shared by the one person who might have been expected to subscribe to it most ardently — Mickey. All Mickey wanted was to have Big Gus in a ring for about three minutes. Or maybe six. Long enough anyway to alter his appearance permanently.

"I never did like the looks of that guy," Mickey said, talking it over after the family had come home from Jerry's office. "It's funny when I stop to think I came near signing up with him for——"

He didn't know yet that it was only Sheila who'd saved him from that error. And it would be a long time before she told him.

"A good thing you didn't," said Barney Kelly.

"You're telling me!" Mickey shook his head. "You had the dope right on that, too, Dad! . . . You know, it's a wonder to me how you've called every play. Considering you were—well kind of out of circulation a long time."

Barney Kelly frowned. But the smile under his bristling mustache was grimly understanding.

"You're learning, son," he said. "Likely you thought all did was walking around the warehouse night after night. But remember after this — a night watchman can do a lot of thinking, while he's watching. Even if he don't choose to talk much about it."

"Yeah," said Mickey. "I get you . . . Say—a man can do a lot of thinking in jail, too, Dad."

Barney look at his son intently.

"I'm listening."

"Well," said Mickey, "about this fight racket, I guess I was kind of bull-headed about that. If you still feel the same way, Dad, I'll hang up my gloves tomorrow."

"That's fine news, boy!" said Barney. "But what of your contract?"

"It's okay. I've already talked to Dan. He's willing, as long as I don't fight for anybody else.

"And you'll finish your education?"

"Whatever you say, Dad."

Barney Kelly went into a fit of bass coughing, the general effect being that of an Atlantic Avenue L train passing over a switch. It was his way of concealing deep emotion.

"I'm glad, son," he said, finally. "Not but that there's many a fine boy in the ring . . . You're sure about Mr. Carroll?"

"Del, I've got some sense at last. I know what a sap I've been. And I'm going to map out of it—once and for all."

"And why wouldn't it be?" asked Barney. "Except that we're the ones should ee giving a party to him." He raised his voice, so that it rumbled through the house. "Mother! I've news for you! And tell one of the girls to stop jabbering long enough to answer the phone! It's ready to ring itself off the wall."

"I'll answer it," called Sheila from upstairs, where she and Patsy and Del had been chatting over the telephone. "Hello. Oh, Brad! I was hoping you'd call!"

Did Jerry make a fatal error when he gave Brad Talton a chance to be the hero of Mickey's vindication? With Sheila's sympathies stirred again by the Talton scion, there's no telling. Particularly as she doesn't know yet why Jerry was so doubtful of Mickey's innocence. Critical developments in her romance—in Patsy's as well—unfold in tomorrow's chapter of this all-Boston serial romance.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27—You find yourself reflecting that this Los Angeles is the all-American city because in the matter of population it is probably the most typically American city in the country. It is an amazing cross-section of the United States. It undoubtedly has more former residents of more different states than any other cities, not excepting even New York.

Damon Runyon

You are meeting out here persons you knew in the East, the Middle West, and the deep South. They are now calling themselves Californians, and saying they would not "go back" for all the gold in Kentucky.

The word "back" is a great expression among these volunteer Californians. They say they are not "going back," or have not "gone back." They mean back where they came from. Any place except California is "back" with them. It is right in the neighboring state of Nevada.

They rarely say "back home," however. Perhaps they do not wish to convey the impression that they regard anywhere else but California as home. That is why you feel you cannot type Los Angeles in the matter of population, as you can most cities, save as all-American.

You were reading in the local public prints only last week that 60,000 former Iowans held their annual picnic here and you are told that the one-time residents of many other states have a custom of getting together once a year to knock over a few seidels of lemonade, and to congratulate each other on having had the good sense to move to California, and it is a mighty poor state, indeed, that cannot muster up at least a few thousand residents of Southern California for this purpose.

Perhaps some of the state picnics draw a few ringers, though you say to yourself, but not on lemonade. In any event you feel that the picnics serve to strengthen your nomination of Los Angeles as your all-American city.

• • •

You remember that back down the years the native sons out here viewed these state picnics with sour expressions, and were given to biting remarks about the "Long Hairs" from the middle west who had moved in on them.

The native sons did not pause to consider that it was their own eternal calling of attention to their climate, and their fruits and flowers that brought the middle westerners here.

And of course the newcomers did not actually wear their hair long. They were in the style produced by placing a pot over the bean and shingling off the hair that stuck out from under the vessel, a style commonly known in those days as a "badger" hair cut. It was really quite nifty.

• • •

What the native sons meant by "long hair" was the ideas, political and otherwise, that they thought might be concealed under the hair cuts.

You remember hearing some native sons talk about the migration of the midlanders as if it were a trespass upon the private property of the home grown citizenry.

Well, sons and daughters of the invaders were born and raised in Southern California, and then came grandsons and granddaughters, and of course they are just as native as the native sons, who, by the way, ceased many years ago viewing with any alarm the picnicking of the midlanders, though they continue to deplore the lemonade.

You reflect that perhaps a couple of generations from now, the descendants of the pioneers from Iowa, and Kansas, and Nebraska, and all those other states, will have the social—and we hope the financial—status of the families of the California forty-niners.

They may not be able to tell their children of the hardships and dangers of the long marches across the plains in covered wagons, or the rides around the Horn in shifty windjammers, but they can spin yarns of jolting jaunts in battered boilers, over long stretches of territory without a single barbecue stand, and of dreary gallops in chair cars with only bananas and home-made sandwiches between their ancestors and starvation.

You feel that it was six to one, and half a dozen of the other. A covered wagon was probably no bargain, but neither were those bananas. The forty-niners came out here to find their gold, and the midlanders brought theirs with them. This makes it another stand-off.

• • •

Anyway, it was to some extent the infusion of the new blood of the high cities immigrants from the middle states, and elsewhere, that helped Los Angeles, and made it what it is today, typically and soundly American, with the traditions of the midlanders worked into the pattern of life of the native sons.

It is a handy thing for the newspaper editors, any time they happen to want to learn something about a state other than California, which of course is rarely. They do not bother to struggle with a heavy atlas. They just stick their heads out an office window and bawl:

"If there a Coloradan (or Kansan or Missourian etc.) around."

Nine men come a-running. At least they used to come a-running.

"Practically everyone at the State House knows who committed the brutal attack which has kept my husband in bed for 10 months.

Mrs. Sara Williams, wife of Dr. David L. Williams, commissioner of mental diseases, today hurled this final challenge at Governor Hurley as the latter laid plans to investigate the alleged attack before his executive council at Wednesday's meeting.

Mrs. Williams, herself a physician, again declined to personally name the man she and her husband charge struck the doctor at his Jamaica Plain home one night last May.

The commissioner alleges the attack occurred after he refused to award a hospital food contract to a certain politician.

Much-Sought Man Held After Chase

A 60-year-old "man of many aliases," erred today when he drove past police headquarters. For his car was spotted by Lieutenant Robert Lynch, of the special service squad, who arrested the driver after a chase.

According to police, the plates were stolen in Roxbury, the car stolen in Back Bay, the driver's license was issued to a spurious person at a Columbus avenue address and the prisoner was listed as wanted in New Jersey for a jail break.

Man, 80, Prisoner of Kin, He Says, Asks Liberty

Charging that a nephew and friends forcibly removed him from a convalescent home and he is now held a prisoner, counsel for John Buchta, 80, of Jamaica Plain, sought his liberty today through superior court.

The petition, brought by City Councillor Robert Gardner Wilson, Jr., as counsel, and Edmund Burke, as friend, names Isaac Buchta of School street, Jamaica Plain, as the nephew.

The superior court Judge Frederick J. Dillon issued an order of notice, returnable Thursday, to the respondent in the petition.

PETITION CHARGE

It alleges that the elder Buchta, ill, was forcibly removed late at night from a Boston convalescent home by Max Buchta, Mildred M. Harris and others on February 9.

Attorney Wilson said the Mildred M. Harris named in the petition is the city councillor from Roxbury.

This was done, it is charged, to prevent the octogenarian from giving testimony from testifying in a court action in which the elder Buchta seeks an accounting from his nephew of money in their joint account.

SAID JUST COMPLAINED

At his home today, Max Buchta denied the charges in the petition, declaring that his uncle had desired to come home and at first at the convalescent home had refused permission. The younger Buchta said he went to South End police station and complained and that a sergeant was sent back to the hospital with him and Mrs. Harris.

Later, John Buchta was released and was taken to the Jamaica Plain address in an ambulance, the nephew maintained.

He refused, however, to allow newspapermen to see the uncle, asserting that the elder Buchta does not speak English.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Secretary Hull has kept significantly silent about the shake-up in the British Cabinet, but he now has had time to study its effects carefully, and it is no secret among his close friends that the resignation of Captain Anthony Eden was a very bitter disappointment.

The reaction was just the opposite, however, among some of Mr. Hull's career boys. For, in the State Department, there exists a secret but very definite split not unlike that which finally blew the lid off the British Cabinet.

Secretary Hull, personally, believes with Anthony Eden that the dictators of the world cannot be permitted to walk off with every-thing they demand. If the democracies yield now, he feels, the greater will be the momentum of their retreat later.

Some of the career boys, on the other hand (such as Hugh Wilson, ambassador to Germany), argue that it is best to let Japan spread out in China, Hitler in southern Europe, and Mussolini in north Africa, since this is the best means not only of avoiding war, but of suppressing Bolshevism.

This is very much the same theals as Prime Minister Chamberlain's.

What worries Mr. Hull most (also both the President and the navy) is Chamberlain's reported pro-Japanese attitude. Eden was just the opposite.

Chamberlain represents the old Tory group which still leans toward the old Anglo-Japanese alliance and believes British made a mistake when the United States persuaded her to relinquish it at the Washington arms conference.

Eden also favored closer ties with the United States all along the line, including the trade treaty now being negotiated. Chamberlain, on the other hand, held out for months against any trade pact with the U. S. A.

AMERICAN WIVES—State Department advisers who are in the Hull group report that most of the men around Chamberlain, following Eden's exit, are anti-American and pro-Japanese.

Some, such as R. E. Craggie, British ambassador to Japan, are so pro-Japanese that during the last London naval negotiations, American officials finally decided it was wiser not to discuss with Craggie certain matters which they did not want to get back to the Japanese.

Mrs. Craggie, an American, daughter of the late Pleasant Stovall, editor of The Savannah, Ga., Press and Woodrow Wilson's minister to Switzerland, is almost as anti-American as her husband.

"Admiral, I really can't understand your countrymen."

"That," replied the Admiral, "is the first time I ever heard a remark like that from a girl from Georgia."

LONG CABINET FEUD—Inside reports received here are that the Eden-Chamberlain row has been brewing for a long time and that the only thing preventing the break months before was Eden's tremendous political following. To most of the eleven million Britons who voted to sustain the League of Nations in Viscount Cecil's poll, he is the nation. No. 1 hero.

One early sign of a break-up came with the appointment of Neville Henderson as British Ambassador to Germany. Eden opposed him, said he was too pro-Nazi. But Chamberlain appointed Henderson over the Foreign Minister's head.

At a dinner reception later, Henderson dropped a remark to the effect that the Austrians should not worry about being Nazified, to which the Austrian ambassador, overhearing, took exception.

"Oh, don't worry," shot back the British ambassador, "you'll soon be one of them."

The Cabinet rupture widened further when Viscount Halifax was sent on an unofficial mission to Berlin, behind Eden's back while he was attending the Nine Power Conference in Brussels.

Gold IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

From the Novel by Clements Ripley

CHAPTER 29

For a long time the Colonel stared after her. Then he got up and got a drink. His mind began to work again.

He didn't regret what he'd done—no, sir, he didn't. 'Course it had been a shock to Serena but she'd come around.

When she really got to know Lucille—why, the whole trouble with Serena was she'd been so much alone! This would be a mighty good thing for her.

By the time he'd had another drink, he'd begun to believe he'd done it mostly for Serena's benefit. Caution suggested, though that maybe he wouldn't bring Lucille to Bannockburn just yet.

LUCILLE DISAGREES

Lucille, it turned out, had a different idea. She showed a startling determination, for one who was so soft and sweet. She was Mrs. Ferris, and she had a right to live at Bannockburn. People would certainly think it was funny—

"As for Serena, I know she doesn't like me, Virginius. And naturally, she's upset. But I'll make her like me. It'll be a little hard at first, I know, but I'll do it —you'll see! Pleased do know what I'm doing! Ah, that's sweet of you, Virginius!"

HARSH WORDS

Dry-eyed, white-lipped, Serena watched from an upstairs window as the buggy drove up. She saw Lucille get out, very bridey in the San Francisco dress. She drew a long breath. Her hands clenched.

They were sitting in the living-room when she came down, her traveling bag in her hand. The Colonel heard her step, and came out, his face gray.

Serena took a step back from him.

"You don't have to tell me what she is! I can smell what she is from here!"

Mr. Bullups (Bullups and Company, Fruits and Vegetables on Consignment) yelled at a drayman unloading cabbages and turned to stare. Country girl, thought Mr. Bullups. Scared.

"I'm Serena Ferris," she explained breathlessly. "I've been sending you peaches. You owe me some money."

Serena had landed an hour ago from the night-boat. In this welter of clattering drays, of yelling, hurrying men, the cold fury that had driven her from Bannockburn had evaporated into chaotic terror and loneliness.

A SHARP EYE

In his office Mr. Bullups spread figures before her. Serena caught her breath. Five thousand, three hundred and eight dollars and twenty cents! But her eye caught an item, even as the pen hung over the check-book. "Drayage—but you've charged it both ways!"

"Couldn't have!" Mr. Bullups inspected the item. "Well, Miss Ferris, sure enough—well, how'd we come to do that!"

His pen scratched rapidly. He handed over the check. He was suddenly genial.

"You know, Miss Ferris, you got an eye for things! If you was a man, now, I'd be offering you a job in my line."

Breathless at her own audacity, Serena said, "Mr. Bullups, I want a job."

It took the startled Mr. Bullups ten sweating minutes to convince her that he had no job for her.

"You could go to Sol Heiman, though," she wrung out of him. "He's the wholesaler that bought most of your stuff."

"IF YOU MUST—"

She found Sol Heiman on Jackson street in a high-piled produce shed. He was a little bald, with quick black eyes and a beaked nose. She explained.

"A job? Nu, Miss Ferris, it ain't no place a lady should be in the produce business!"

"Look here," Serena was desperate. "I want to pack up some baskets of peaches for you. If they don't sell better—"

"For a lady, it ain't a business, Miss Ferris. But if you must—"

Heiman's eyes glittered.

"You come tomorrow. This thing, a lady in the produce business, I don't like it. But we talk."

Me took her to a little hotel on Washington street. He shook his head, doubtfully. But to the clerk he said:

"My own daughter it could be, Marcus. She gets it nice—and clean—and cheap!"

Morning!, Sol Heiman waved his hands:

"For 20 years, Miss Ferris, I run loafers, 'it ain't no good you put the little peaches at the bottom—them buyers, they figure on that!' And now it comes you— and the fruit ain't no better only it looks better! And what happens—the steward of the Pacific Club, he gives us 25 cents over the market!"

Serena had a job!

SHE PAYS THE DEBT

Serena had a debt, too. She consulted her little black book, with her peach accounts. She deposited her money she had corkscrewed in the Wells Fargo Bank.

Then she sent a check for four thousand odd to her father . . .

The check came back a week later —through the bank. There was a note from Colonel Ferris, a whiplash in every line.

But a debt was a debt to Serena. She didn't know how these things were done, but this had to be done. She talked to Mr. McClean, at the Wells Fargo.

Mr. McClean threw dice an hour later for the onion soup at Tait's. "The damnest set-up! Here she comes in — you saw her, Jimmy. Country clothes but, you know — nice. Well, this Colonel Virginius Ferris has returned her check. Mad! At being paid money!

"Colonel Ferris has made a mortgage on his place—Bannockburn. And she wants to know if she can apply this money, four thousand or so, on his mortgage interest. Well I looked it up for her. The D. O. Mills bank ought to own that mortgage. But not—Listen, Jim, you don't get it yet?

"Why, old man Virginius Ferris is with the valley ranchers, fighting this hydraulicking crowd. And you know who's behind the hydraulickers! . . . Ralph Ferris!

THE LAST STAND

The Colonel set out whiskey and brandy. For weeks now, Tolliver Parsons had been hammering at him and tonight he was bringing some of the valley crowd for a final attempt to bring him into the ranchers' lobby at Sacramento.

The Colonel was as set as ever against the lobbying scheme. He didn't call it "lobbying," he called it: "bribery," but for all that, he had found himself curiously eager at the thought of having some of his old crowd at Bannockburn again. The Colonel was lonely. His friends hadn't called on Lucille.

He sat out the glasses clumsily. Wong and Ramon, those life-time fixtures, had left after the first month of the Colonel's new, yellow-haired wife, and there was a raw-boned female in the kitchen whose ideas of serving a gentleman were vague. And ten minutes ago, Lucille had gone upstairs in another fit of angry hysterics.

A CHANGEABLE WOMAN

Five days ago when he had told her that some men would be coming in this evening, she had sat on his knee and prattled happily of a dinner-party. The Colonel had cleared his throat uncomfortably. He petted her. This was just a business meeting.

He soothed everything. He went to bed relieved. Next morning she was at it again. Sweet, persistent. Not so sweet—suddenly, violently angry.

The storm had broken again, tonight. She screamed the things he had carefully hidden from himself. And it didn't make it any better that there was something on her side.

He eyed the glasses unhappily. The glasses didn't look quite right. Serena had always set them out before for him. His grizzled brows drew down. He didn't want to think about Serena. He went to the door as the first buggy-wheels sounded on the drive.

They had him cornered by the sideboard. "Frankly, Gin," Dulane was saying, "it's not the way I'd sooney go at it myself. But it's life and death to us ranchers! Right now, the mining crowd and the railroads control the Legislature. We've got to fight fire with fire."

The Colonel shook his head. "Mighty little good comes of that," he said stubbornly. "Our recourse is still with the courts. Woodruff at Marysville's starting another suit. If we was to back him up on that—"

"You saw what the courts did to us last time," Tolliver Parsons broke in impatiently. "If you think a California court's going to decide against hydraulicking—"

"BRIBE" MONEY?

"It ain't a California court," the Colonel reminded him. "This is Federal Court. Makes it different. The stuff that comes down from the mines is blockin' a navigable river, fillin' up the Maze Isand navy yard."

"They can fill it jam full before any court, Federal or not, 'll give us a fair shake. Now look here, Gin, we've got to come in with us. We're putting up a thousand each for expense."

A thin-faced lawyer of a man stepped forward. He was Keenan, the lobbyist, whom Tolliver Parsons had brought in to talk to the Colonel.

"Colonel Ferris," he said, "I don't think you quite understand what we're going to do. Now, we're not bribing anybody. But there are certain expenses connected with legislation—part of them, I'll tell you frankly, my own fee."

The railroad lobby, he explained, was the most powerful lobby at Sacramento. Next came the mine group-powerful because organized. But the majority of the legislators were farmers.

SHREWD STRATEGY

"Now," he went on, "as you probably know there are three main types in every legislature. The first are the clowns, the professional politicians. Then, there are the conscientious reformers. They're honest, but politically inept. Third, there are the intelligent, brilliant men who are sent to the Legislature for a purpose. They know exactly what they want and they control legislation —mainly through the clowns.

"Now, I don't propose to buy anybody. But I do propose to stampede the clowns. They won't stay stampeded, but if we work quick enough, they'll do the trick. We've got to take them by surprise."

"You've got to come in with us, Gin!" Dulane seconded earnestly. "Your name'll bring in the small ranchers."

Somebody touched his arm. "Colonel, Mrs. Ferris is calling you."

'Married Comrades'

By Adele Garrison

AT my mother-in-law's knock and imperative demand, "Margaret, open the door! What's going on?" Lillian raised her clenched hands with a melodramatic gesture and shook them despairingly.

"Are you asleep, or deaf, or pretending not to hear me?" she asked, and then a suave voice sounded from the stairs.

"Ah! Good morning! I trust it is a good morning to you."

MADGE ACTS QUICKLY

"Mother! Quick! Just say 'good morning,' and then hurry in here!" I was counting upon her love of melodrama for obedience, for, ordinarily, she will not take a command, or even a suggestion, from anybody. I had not counted wrongly, for her head jerked upward and into her eyes came a gleam of excited interest.

I shut the door before I answered her, and gave an extra fillip to her interest by locking it.

"Let me get to come in with us. We're putting up a thousand each for expense."

Mrs. Beeckman on Good Manners

Will you please give me the following information as we have had some debate in our Sunday school class about these questions.

1—When sending a greeting card to the Sunday school teacher (he is a man), should it be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. So and So, or just to Mr. So and So?

2—When one has met a stranger, and when leaving, he said, "I am glad to have met you, Mrs. Blank," was it correct for her just to reply, "thank you," or should she have also said that she was "glad to have met" him.

3—What should a hostess at a woman's club or Sunday school class social say to guests(when they are leaving. B.

1—The greeting card should be addressed to MR. AND MRS.

2—It isn't incorrect for us to say only "Thank you" when a person says a pleasant "I am glad to have met you," but, when we study it, it is certainly more gracious to indicate that we, too, have had pleasure in the meeting. So saying only a "Thank you" does seem a bit brusque.

We can, therefore, say "Thank you, I am glad to have met you, too," or "Thank you so much. It has been a pleasure to meet you, too," or "Thank you, Mr. Brown. I have enjoyed so much our chat together."

3—The hostess at a woman's club or other gathering says to departing guests about what she would say to guests who are leaving her home . . . "Good-bye. It was such a pleasure to have you come this afternoon," or "Thank you for coming this afternoon. You always add so much to the meeting."

ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please give me some advice on announcing my engagement? I thought of having a luncheon bridge at one of our clubs, having a centerpiece of corsages, and after the luncheon asking the guests to pull the ribbons, to each of which an announcement has been attached.

Or would it be better to have a corsage at each place with an announcement? F.

I am more enthusiastic about your having the corsages at the guests' places. This decorative note at each place makes such a charming contributions of color that it seems too bad not to use it.

And it is simple to plan your centerpiece to harmonize with this individual place arrangement.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Listen, World!

Young America Speaks

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"TWO FAMILIES UNDER ONE ROOF—" There's a subject which is always good for a roof-raisin' rumpus . . . and a flood of sympathy for the younger couple.

But how about the Old Folk . . . just what sort of a break do Gramp and Grandma get? GEORGE T. POWELL, Jr., of Macon, Ga., is asking—in a grand letter which should make many a selfish young couple Stop, Look and Listen.

"Dear Elsie:

"I am absolutely against married couples living with their parents, unless it is a matter of family necessity, and even then it is a dangerous experiment, for it encourages selfishness and weakness in the newlyweds.

"Why should old folk who have reared a family be worried with a bride and groom? Why should Grandma and Grandpa have to train their grandchildren? Why should they have to prepare lunch for Junior when he comes in from school, or see that Johnnie doesn't go out without his sweater, or that Susie eats her spinach?

"It's all wrong. It puts the home responsibility on the old folks who ought, in common decency, to be 'taking things easy' instead of having to work harder.

"If the young couple both work, then poor Father and Mother must answer the door, receive all the telephone calls, send out the laundry, take in the dry cleaning, buy and haul home and cook the groceries, and see that the home machinery runs smoothly at all times.

"And, if either son or daughter gets sick, poor Father and Mother must call the doctor and wait upon the patient. These are the very things young married folks need to do for themselves.

"Home-making cannot be learned overnight. It is only learned by the painful and personal repetition of daily humdrum tasks and sacrifices. Living with, or on, the home folks MAY save the young folks money, but it won't teach them independence; it will make them SOFT and incapable of planning for their best interests.

"George T. Powell, 2d.
"Macon, Georgia."

($10 PRIZE WINNER)

What a grand son-in-law you'll make, George, if you live up to your ideas!

Here's another domestic problem which has been starting a string of battles: SHOULD A BRIDE PUT ALL HER SAVINGS INTO THE NEW HOME WHEN SHE WEDS . . . AND GIVE HER NEW HUSBAND ABSOLUTE FAITH?

"Yes!" says young MRS. ELIZABETH MAVIS of Clintonville, Wis.

"Dear Miss Robinson:

"I believe every bride should give all her savings toward the new home. It establishes marriages on the right foundation of faith and understanding. The wife who has worked and saved money knows what a man's work means to him, and they have much more in common.

"Teamwork is the basis of success in marriage—teamwork both in savings and faith.

"Tangible things acquired together cement love. If, after contributing her savings, the wife still feels she would like to save money for emergencies, I suggest saving a little out of her allowance each week. A small amount put aside adds up fast.

"Show me the man who is not happy to find that his wife has salted away a little for the rainy day or some unexpected mishap!

"Mrs. Elizabeth Mavis, age 27,
"Clintonville, Wis."

($10 PRIZE WINNER)

She's 100 per cent correct, says I. But ETHEL STEIES of New Auburn, Wis., doesn't agree with me. Do you think she is right? And am I just a sentimental old valentine?

"DON'T GIVE UP EVERYTHING . . . DON'T BELIEVE EVERYTHING," says Ethel. "KEEP AN ACE UP YOUR SLEEVE . . . AND YOUR TONGUE IN YOUR CHEEK!" What do YOU think of that as a policy for Newlyweds? Privately I don't think much—yet Ethel sounds like a Regular Pal in spite of her warped viewpoint.

"Dear Miss Robinson:

"I don't believe a girl should put all her savings into a home. There's a transition time in marriage—for a girl—between her former financial independence and her new dependence on her husband.

"If she has a little money of her own to lean on, it will bridge that time.

"Besides—men are NOT saints. No woman can know what a man really is BEFORE marriage. How does she know he will play fair? Faith is fine, but one must make sure that both parties are capable of it. 'Better be sure than sorry' . . . there are enough divorces . . . why not do one's best to ward another one off? After a fair trial, any normal girl should be willing to give everything.

"IF A MAN CAN'T AFFORD MARRIAGE LET HIM WAIT UNTIL HE CAN. Also, there are plenty of times, later on, when the bride's savings may be more needed than at first.

"Ethel Steies, age 21,
"New Auburn, Wis."

($5 PRIZE WINNER)

Does Your Breath Broadcast— "I WEAR FALSE TEETH"?

Play Safe—Be Sure—Use Polident

Most people who wear plates or bridges suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it —but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing cannot prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing can stop "denture breath"—and that's Polident! This new brushless cleaner for false teeth has won the approval of thousands of dentists. Users say it is a great blessing.

Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tartar and deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 30¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if you are not delighted.

Your Figure Madame

EXERCISE STANCE DETERMINES RESULTS

By IDA JEAN KAIN

GET a good start with your exercise. If you start from the wrong posture you cannot expect calisthenics to turn you into a beauty. As a matter of fact, exercise in slumped posture may do more harm than good—it may give you a double chin and a sway back!

You waste time when you exercise spasmodically or haphazardly, but exercise in the wrong position is worse than a waste of time. What it does is strengthen the muscles in an incorrect position and the results are likely to be just the opposite of desirable.

Posture discipline not only strengthens the muscles for the maintenance of correct posture at all times; but it also markedly increases the effectiveness of an exercise. Definite posture rules are most important to your exercise program. As you go through your daily dozen, keep the following in mind.

1. Hold the head well up. As you work up momentum in certain exercises there is a tendency to let the head poke forward. This tendency must be counteracted by pulling up with the muscles at the sides and back of the neck.

2. At all times have the shoulders back but never hunched up or rigid. Raising the shoulders produces muscular tension and interferes with freedom of movement.

3. Keep the chest up—and up does not mean out. This lift of the chest should originate in the lower abdominal wall and extend through the chest, strengthening all these muscles.

4—In specific exercise, the line of pull is directed to a particular group of muscles. One part of the body participates in the movement, and the others parts may be perfectly still. For example, in twisting exercises to slim the waist you do not turn the hips as you twist at the waist. Or, when the arms are propelled forward and backward from the shoulders to strengthen the pectoral muscles and improve the bust, you do not swing the body from the waist. Otherwise the exercise would lose its effectiveness.

5—Select your exercises program carefully to correct any posture fault. If you have a pronounced sway back, avoid all backward bending and back kicking exercises. Do those in which you bend forward, arching the back. When shoulders droop forward, arm circling should be backward.

Combined with the requisite enthusiasm and persistence, these posture rules can help you to get the most out of exercise. Only five minutes of daily exercise can make an improvement in your figure, and you will be delighted with the results of a thirty minutes program.

Aside from checking up on your posture during exercise, put into constant practice the rule that, whether short or tall, you will live up to every inch of your height.

Posture is too important a personality factor to be overlooked. Write for the leaflet, "Posture Makes the Figure," which tells you how to develop a naturally graceful carriage. Enclose a stamped envelope for the leaflet.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Angle Your Way to Beauty

THERE'S ONLY one time when you can lie down on the beauty job and really accomplish big things . . . for even the beauty nap when rest turns new vigor into the channels of your system can't possibly equal the result of a new angle-trick that amplifies the work of a marvelous throat-beautifying cream a thousandfold. Try it and see!

Timely Aids To Beauty

If you find that you have a cellulite spot on the outer side of the leg (as you can be sure the shoe is too narrow. There is pressure there. Nature banks up the flesh so there will be no injury.

Soak the feet in warm soapy water; dry, friction away the hardened cuticle with a toilet pumice stone, apply mineral oil—and get wider shoes.

There is a simple way of finding out what your weight should be. Multiply the number of inches you are over five feet by five. Add that to 110 and you'll have the answer. Let us say you are five feet four. You should weigh 137.

No rule can be infallible because sometimes bones are large, sometimes small. Seven or eight pounds either way don't matter. If proportions are good and posture correct, the silhouette will be graceful and pleasing.

Trick of Position Aids Neck Rejuvenating Cream

By ARLINE GOULD

MORE FACES and throats have been pummeled out of beauty in the careless days of "facials" than we like to think about. With mass pulling and stretching going on at all sides, it's a wonder the "flaming youth" era which tangled up so many other things, and which saw the hey-day of the strenuous "facial," didn't turn out a generation of complete hags.

And it is quite likely that much saving of the day and the face has been done recently by such a youth-renewing treatment as the world-famous angle trick that should be added to your repertoire of pet habits if it's not already there. We've just discovered a miraculous combination of "angle" and an unusual preparation that will save your neck, which is the first dead give-away of encroaching age.

While you relax comfortably in the position so well illustrated by the model above, you should mould into the throat and upper shoulders with an upward, rotary movement a certain cream which looks like eclair filling and certainly smells good enough to eat!

* * *

It is a special "ultra dry" formula cream which is compounded for just one thing—to be used below the chin, where you need it most. Naturally, it's grand for your face, but since that doesn't need its good work quite as much, save every smear of it for your throat.

Working on this famous salon's well-proven theory that you must nourish from within as well as from without—the angle which you take speeds blood to the area which is being treated. And you get the importance of roused circulation without the old expedients of hot towels and ruinous slapping!

In the New York salon, a scientifically designed chair does the trick. But you may work out practically the same expensive routine with the arrangement illustrated today.

If the time has come when your face and neck imply a disheartening suggestion of age and you know instinctively that they must be handled with the same care as fragile glass, then you must resort to this method, which will never break down the delicate tissues of the face and neck, causing the face to sag and grow old much before its time.

* * *

It is particularly grand for lines under the eyes. Famous New York women have been singing the praises of its throat-smoothing wonders, and so it's with particular eagerness that we tell you about it now—at the same time when the neck cream is available for around half-price, and that but for a little time! It's around a dollar and a half, you'll be delighted to hear.

We will be glad to tell you of the special formula throat cream, which is about half-price now, and which, with the angle trick, has saved the necks of many a "ten best dressed women" type in New York, where it originated. For information, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American, including a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

GERMAN DINNER
Marinated Herring Appetizer
Sauerbraten Potato Dumplings
Spiced Red Cabbage
Rye Bread Butter
Cucumber Salad with Sour Cream Dressing
German Apple Cake
Liederkranz Cheese Crackers
Coffee

SAUERBRATEN

Select a roast of beef, top sirloin, or bottom round. Lard it with a piece of salt pork or bacon (or choose a cut of meat with fat). Rub it with garlic, salt and pepper. Place it in a crock or bowl large enough to permit it to be covered with liquid but not permit excessive amounts around the outside.

Heat but do not boil:
Equal parts of mild vinegar or white wine and water
2 tablespoons salt
4 bay leaves
2 large onions, sliced
½ lemon, sliced
1 teaspoon peppercorns
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon whole cloves

Pour while hot over the beef so that it is covered. Cover crock and put in the refrigerator. Leave the meat in this mixture for a week, turning two or three times. Drain it. Save the vinegar, and cook the meat as you would a pot roast, using the vinegar in place of stock. A Dutch Oven such as is used for pot roasts is the proper utensil for cooking.

Place 4 tablespoons chopped meat in Dutch Oven and render. Then brown roast all over. Add liquid gradually as meat cooks.

When meat is tender, remove from pot. Thicken liquid with flour or 1 cup of sour cream. Some cooks prefer to add raisins, gingersnaps or catsup.

When gravy has been properly blended and prepared, place meat in Dutch Oven again and cook with gravy or sauce for 10 or 15 minutes before serving.

Serve garnished with parsley and be sure to serve potato dumplings or Kartoffel Klosse as an accompaniment.

POTATO DUMPLINGS
8 to 10 medium-sized potatoes
3 eggs
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup flour
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs

Boil potatoes uncovered in their jackets until tender. Chill thoroughly in the refrigerator over night. Remove jackets and grate or rice them. Add other ingredients and mix thoroughly. Mix batter with a fork until it is fluffy. (It may be necessary to add a few more bread crumbs to make batter dry enough to handle.)

Prepare ¼ cup croutons. Roll batter lightly into balls about 1¼ inch in diameter enveloping a crouton in the center of each. Drop a few at a time into lightly boiling salted water for 10 minutes.

Dress dumplings with
½ cup butter
2 teaspoons onion, finely chopped
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs

Bridge Faulty Play

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It goes without saying that the more information one partner can give the other the better is their combined chance to reach the proper contract.

But this is not the whole story. There is information and information!

Since the number of bids that either partner can have on a given hand is necessarily limited it is vital to discriminate among the facts that can be expressed.

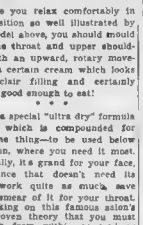
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 N.T.	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

The six club contract would have been made if South had been able to guess the club situation. Not being second-sighted, declarer laid down the Ace and then the Queen with the reasonable hope that he could capture the club ten either on the second or third round of the suit.

Unfortunately the adverse distribution made this impossible, and the contract was down one. But even if the small slam in clubs had been fulfilled the contract still would have been a very bad one in comparison to what it should have been.

North's bidding had made it impossible to reach the correct contract, namely, hearts. He had bid two hearts over South's one club and, while this was quite justified despite his club void, because of his tremendous strength, he could certainly not expect his partner to realize that he had made this jump takeout and his later four no-trump bid without a single club.

South's extreme club length certainly made it appear that no support in the suit would be required. But "no support" is one thing, and a void quite another.

Catarrhal Fever Treatment

By ROYAL F. COPELAND, M. D.

"CATARRHAL Fever" is a name suggested by physicians for that malady usually known as "cold in the head."

It is a common disorder and is almost universal at this time of the year.

Only recently I pointed out to you the many dangers of neglecting colds, grippe and influenza. Let me speak again about the importance of immediate care for these disorders, which are similar in many ways, and widespread in their attacks against the human family.

Despite the tremendous advances made in the study of germs in many diseases the actual cause or germ has not as yet been discovered. This is true of catarrhal fever. Undoubtedly, many factors contribute to the development of the disorder. This statement is confirmed by lack of uniformity in its performance.

There is no denying the importance of keeping the body as healthy as possible at all times. It is known that once the body has a lowering of its resistance against germs, catarrhal fever occurs. In addition, exposure to cold, with sudden chilling, is a common forerunner of an infection of the upper air passages. Fatigue, excessive exercise, immoderate indulgence in alcohol, the lack of vitamins in the diet and chronic nasal sinusitis are factors that must not be overlooked.

Catarrhal fever is usually prevalent in places where many persons congregate. It is rapidly spread among people who attend churches, schools, theaters and other indoor meeting places. In times of severe epidemics it is well that such gatherings be avoided.

The victim of "cold in the head" usually complains of chilliness, aches and pain all over the body, headache and loss of taste and smell. The eyes run, fever is present, and the patient complains of excessive weakness. Cough and sneezing may be present.

Chivalry Still Lives, True Love Idyll Shows

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If you think so, it may be that you haven't known where to look for these things.

But I can assure you that there are plenty of brave, warm-hearted boys of simpler up-bringing who are profoundly capable of idealistic love. Now and then there are even knights and heroes among them. Let me tell you a story . . .

It has been George's way to attend strictly to his business.

But last summer, having to pass through the hospital's convalescent ward, he picked up a scrap that a pretty 19-year-old patient, Priscilla Lee, had dropped.

The scrap was merely blind text found. They talked together. And next day they talked again.

"I LOVE YOU"

A few weeks later he said to her:

"Priscilla, I love you. We must get married. Do you like me a little?"

Tears streamed from the girl's half-blinded eyes.

"George," she protested "you don't know me. I'm not good enough for you. They sent me here from the Rockside Home at Valley Stream. When my eyes are better, the judge will make me go back again."

George thought it over.

"I'll fix it up with the judge, dear," he said confidently. "And remember, you're mine, forever."

Several operations had to be performed on Priscilla's eyes. She stayed on at the hospital month after month. Nearly every day she and George had an innocent tryst.

Meanwhile, George, though he didn't know much about the ways of courts, composed a letter to Judge Moran, Lowville, Lewis County.

SUPREME SACRIFICE

He begged to have the charges against Priscilla dismissed. He loved her.

The judge was impressed by the letter. The reply that he sent told George that Priscilla would be free to marry him. Full of joy, George ran to the Eye Ailment Ward to show to his beloved the terribly important document.

"You see, dear," he said. "As soon as they've fixed up your eyes we can be the happiest people in the world."

To a fellow-patient who saw her depart she said:

"It's impossible for me to marry George. He's always been good. I'm not the right girl for him. And he shouldn't have the burden of my blindness. I want him to find a better girl."

[illegible] that way to a woman [illegible] and [illegible] threw herself [illegible] two months [illegible] she didn't [illegible] And [illegible] time [illegible] recover the injury to her eyes. But it will [illegible] some time.

"Dear darling," George said [illegible] when they told him she just couldn't seem to understand. But we couldn't live without each other. The minute she's out of the hospital we'll be married."

GIRL About TOWN

By ANN MARSTERS

Of all the professions we've ever come in contact with, that of tea tasting is certainly one of the most fascinating.

We had quite a talk with Mr. Jack Halloran, who's been tea taster for the Salada Tea Company, on Stuart street, for the past 17 years.

Ann Marsters

If you've happened to look in the window of the Salada building, you may have seen him and his co-worker, Max Tito, tasting away. They work on a long, glass-topped table. In front of them is a row of little tea pots and cups, each one numbered, and each filled in turn with different types and qualities of tea. (There's about 20 tea pots in a row.

The tea must be brewed, cup by cup, and they have a little scale which measures out just about six ounces. Bubbling water must be poured over the leaves and allowed to brew for six minutes. (They have a time clock which rings a bell when the six minutes is up.) Then, of course, the tea is ready to be tasted and graded.

Mr. Halloran tells us that he tastes on an average of 100 cups a day—but it's not unusual to taste 300.

It doesn't matter whether or not the tea is purchased from the same garden, it has to be tasted all over again, because the quality of tea changes from plucking to plucking.

At least a year sometimes two or three, must be spent in learning how to be an expert tea taster. To begin with you develop your sense of smell—as regards tea. Then you start tasting and learn, gradually, to distinguish the good from the bad the mild from the strong, and all the degrees in between.

Some people never can learn to be experts at it. For tea tasting is a delicate talent and you have to be born with it.

Mr. Halloran modestly has not lost his liking for tea in the years that he's been tasting it for business purposes. He frequently has tea for breakfast—with milk and sugar in it.

• • •

APPRECIATION

It was a game of make-believe,
But that's the way of living—
So often tea can gain our ground
Pretending we are giving

I don't reproach you for your pose—
A grand impersonation
Of long, big, well-dressed lower classes
Inspire imitation

But with the final curtain down,
You fled, and barely nodded—
Oh what a shame you did not wait
To see how I appended!

So the billboard people are educating the American public in the field of fine art.

We, as a country, have had a lot of criticism on our blatant advertising which mars the landscape. But who could object to the use of billboards as a means of displaying masterpieces?

Now dotting the billboard landscape in many places there's a huge reproduction of a painting with the announcement: "Presented for the benefit of the public by the Outdoor Advertising Company of America." The painting a Gainsborough's "Blue Boy."

Vose Exhibit Hailed in South

Speaking of art word comes from Charlotte, N. C. that the group of 65 canvases from the Robert C. Vose Galleries of Boston, is causing quite a stir wherever it is exhibited. The local paper there says "... the most ambitious and comprehensive display of paintings ever shown in this section of the South."

Mr. Vose who is internationally known as a collector and art authority, is touring and lecturing with his paintings and also "meeting many delightful people." In Atlanta, he spent an evening with Margaret Mitchell and found her as "fascinating as her book."

The paintings, by the way, include famous examples of the work of Corot, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Rubens Gainsborough, Monet, Renoir Copley, Romney and Dupre.

SHOPPING HINTS—Dresses are tricky, these days. Buy one, and it seems you end up with half a dozen, and a hat thrown in. If they have boleros and sashes, you can do all sorts of things with them. Anyway, Gilchrist's has a "Babushka" dress at $8.95. It's black, with a Russian print bolero and a triangular sash. The sash may be worn as a hat, too . . . Need any cold cream or cleansing tissues? Jordans is having a sale of the Latour brand, at big reductions. Lovely five o'clock dresses at Jays. One with a quilted flower effect in front, and all the way around the hem. Comes in soft pastel shades—at $38.90.

THIS Is LIFE

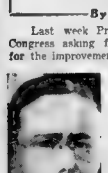
By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Last week President Roosevelt sent a message to the Congress asking for enlarged Federal grants to the states for the improvement of the public schools.



Robert E. Rogers subsidies.

He suggests that the United States government start paying out 70 million dollars a year from this coming July, an amount that would rise to about 200 millions in the course of about six years.

Assuming that the present cost of the public schools is about 2000 millions a year, the federal government would be paying an additional 10 per cent to help the poorer and more backward states help furnish an education equal to that of the richer and more progressive states.

That means, to put it bluntly, that New England and the other northeastern states will be subsidizing most of the southern and a good many of the western states. The emphasis is, obviously, upon the South. It usually is when it comes to questions of states that already are supporting very expensive public school systems to bear in addition a considerable portion of the burden necessary to put the poor and backward states on a firmer educational footing.

It is intended is advanced that this federal subsidy amounts to only 10 per cent of the already heavy cost of public education. But even these same states we might be willing to agree that it is a swell theory.

But we find it a little difficult to forget that our well-to-do northeastern states have already been contributing a good deal for western and southern agriculture and flood relief and all that, without even getting back OUR share of the federal subsidies.

Even if it seems a mistake to start such a radical breaking of precedents as the President's message indicates.

Let the backward states do their part in balancing the budget. Then it will be soon enough to think of subsidizing them—at our expense.

All Men Born Equal 'Like Blank Paper'

It is a question which, as the French say, "gives one seriously to think." From one point of view it is entirely in line with American idealism. From the time of the Founding Fathers — and before — America has been willing to sacrifice much to ensure adequate education for her children.

America inherited in full measure belief in that philosophy enunciated by Hobbes and John Locke in the 17th century which insisted that "all men were born equal, like a blank sheet of white paper, and that everything which served to improve the mind came from outside influences environment and education."

In the 18th century under the influence of this same philosophy a Frenchman, Fourier, insisted that proper education alone could produce 20 million mathematicians equal to Newton and 20 million poets equal to Shakespeare. That, roughly, was the idealistic belief America enthroned during the 18th century. On that basis the American public school system was built up.

But it was also built up on another theory, that this was a generation of states self-supporting, responsible, and individual.

Totalitarian State Theory of Spending

Provided one accepts the theory of the totalitarian state, it is probably just and fair that the federal government should equalize the moneys spent for education in the separate states, spending federal money to give the children in the poorer states, particularly in the poorer, rural districts, an opportunity more nearly like that the children in the richer states enjoy.

Exactly that is where the rub comes. For the federal government will not be spending its own money. It will be asking certain states that already are supporting very expensive public school systems to bear in addition a considerable portion of the burden necessary to put the poor and backward states on a firmer educational footing.

It is intended is advanced that this federal subsidy amounts to only 10 per cent of the already heavy cost of public education. But even these same states we might be willing to agree that it is a swell theory.

But we find it a little difficult to forget that our well-to-do northeastern states have already been contributing a good deal for western and southern agriculture and flood relief and all that, without even getting back OUR share of the federal subsidies.

Even if it seems a mistake to start such a radical breaking of precedents as the President's message indicates.

Let the backward states do their part in balancing the budget. Then it will be soon enough to think of subsidizing them—at our expense.

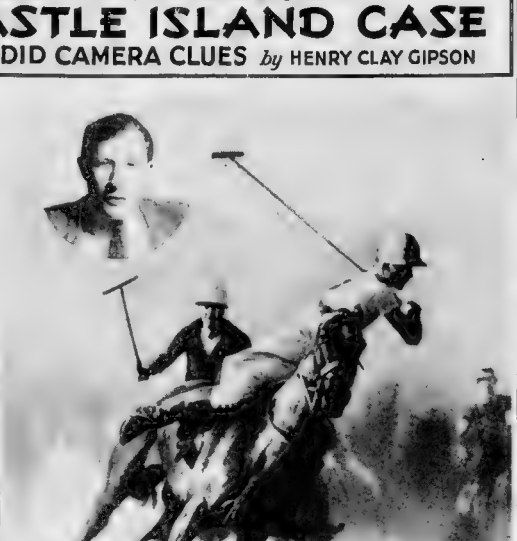
CHAPTER I

At three thousand feet the Bermuda Clipper's Chief Pilot levelled off, leaving behind an angry welter of thunder heads which, by two hours, had delayed departure from Port Washington Airbase.

Once the hum of the four engines had steadied to a subdued, almost restful, monotone the fifteen passengers settled themselves more comfortably, most of them watching watery yellow sunlight attempt to lance through a ceiling of gray rain clouds.

Major Roger Allenby heaved a little sigh and tentatively explored his pockets for that cigarette case which had so often so many anxious moments.

The sighing companion-piece, however, seemed just a trifle too far away to be cared back, very fixed on the immensity of the Atlantic which dotted with whitecaps as seen stretched on towards Africa, just a vast penetration of time.



Clip the Camera Clues

He was leaving a storm behind. Allenby reflected, and fervently hoped that no more were to be in store for him ahead.

Bermuda, he mused from a remote personal view, was a haven from the inordinate pressure of life in New York. Decidedly, he was in a frame of mind to make the most of a relief from business as usual.

Obedient to a final prodding from his conscience Allenby sank back into the deep seat, closed his eyes and carefully scanned mental notes made during that rather unusual luncheon he had had with Ted Bailey, president of the Inter-Ocean Life Assurance Company.

AN UNUSUAL CASE

To his surprise Ted usually definite customer had been uncertain and when he began to speak he had seemed downright unhappy, almost shamefaced.

"This matter isn't routine, Roger, and I'm asking you to take on this assignment as a personal favor of an old friend of ours. Remember Louisa Phillips?"

"The one who went to school with us—wide mouth, big blue eyes and freckles?"

Ted Bailey had nodded. "Name's Fortier now. Married a Canadian, but he died two or three years later, leaving Louisa pretty much and with a couple of kids—girls. She hasn't had an easy time of it and needs money very badly."

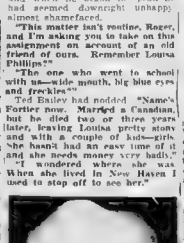
"I wondered where she'd gone. When she lived in New Haven I used to stop off to see her."



MAJOR ROGER ALLENBY
A detective with a genuine camera eye

"Well, this case concerns Judy, her eldest daughter. I call it a 'case' though there may be nothing out of the way about Judy's death."

Studiously, Ted Bailey had avoided melodrama but Allenby couldn't help reacting with an underlying agitation in his voice.

"To cut a long story short, Judy Fortier took a job as secretary to a chap called Grafton, Barnard Grafton—that was about two years ago."

Roger Allenby recalled asking "He the Grafton mentioned in those negligence suits? The ones over some workmen who were killed when the Albion Arms building fell down?"

"Yes. Grafton was cleared though, but the superintendent on the job got five years.

"Well, getting back to our muttons, Louisa's daughter had been with Grafton about a year and a half and everyone thought they were in love when Barney, as they call him, quite suddenly married for a second time. The bride was a young widow from Boston, Pirate of money."

"Business deal?"

"Not in this case apparently—they say Grafton's really crazy about her and a little awed, too. Well, just recently Barney's doctor ordered him to take a rest, so he and his wife sailed to Bermuda for two months' stay at a place he owns down there. Judy Fortier was taken along."

Briefly Major Allenby interrupted his review to pluck from his pocket a single column clipping which he studied and then, as if manipulating a mental photograph, he started to revolving again a disc of the insurance man's conversation.

"They'd been there just over two weeks when one morning, August 27th, Judy didn't come down to breakfast. The Graftons and their servants hunted everywhere and at last found a suicide note and her slippers on the deserted point called Treasure Head.

Here Allenby had fixed his friend with a penetrating look. "Please never forget, you know, we don't like paying premiums when there's no corpus delicti."

"Judy a good swimmer?"

"No. Pretty weak, by all accounts. That was brought out in the coroner's verdict along with the fact that there's a strong tide around Treasure Head."

Allenby could hear his own voice saying "Then where's the catch?"

"We can't find a motive for the act, Roger. Patricia, her sister, wrote to me that Judy's last letter was particularly cheerful. She was simply crazy about Bermuda and the Bermudians.

"I'd heard nothing about the tragedy," the head of Inter-Ocean Life Assurance Company had continued "until Williamson drew my attention to the claim Patricia as principal beneficiary had filed for her sister's insurance—they're both insured with us by the way.

"He didn't like the absence of her body—especially because Judy's policy was written for $25,000 with a double indemnity clause."

"Um. Rather high for a secretary." Allenby had murmured "Odd."

Call it unusual anyhow, Roger. Though we can't put our fingers on anything except a lack of motive for suicide the Board of Adjusters feel the case should be further investigated before a settlement is made. Williamson maintains there's not sufficient proof that dark blue breast

Judy Fortier is really dead and, frankly, there isn't.

"Here's another catch, Barnard Grafton a very important figure in New York business and he'll raise eyebrows if we needlessly get his family mixed up in any notoriety. You can see an investigation will require lots of tact.

From below a faint booming sound manifested itself and, gaining in volume, lasted about and smiled to himself. Heigh-ho!

Bermuda's beaches of sun-warmed coral sand were calling more vociferously than ever. After a summer amid the reeking exhausts of New York, the elusive fragrance of the oleanders and the soothing whisper of wind in the cedar tops would be as balm of Gilead.

Fervently he hoped the Fortier matter would not take too much time.

A CAMERA ADDICT

A battle of dishes and bespoke preparations for tea, whereupon Allenby all at once became aware of a respectable appetite.

"In five minutes, sir," the steward encouraged him.

Half past three. Thanks to Day Light Saving there would be no time change, and the Bermuda Clipper should be passing into Great Sound in approximately another hour and a half.

Wondering if he would be able to get any unusual snapshots, he pulled his Leica from its case and fingered it absently. The Islands should make a grand shot from the air.

"By the way," the big stranger held out his hand, "my name's Ward —C. Townley Ward—but for the benefit of my friends I'm known as Buck. What did you say your name was?" Ward's powerfully modeled, reddish features contracted.

"Allenby—Major Roger Allenby."

Clip the Camera Clues

"That's funny." Ward said. "I've heard the name before somewhere."

"I used to run a small-town bank," Allenby fibbed pleasantly. "I was lucky enough to make a reasonable stake. So I sold out."

"Dumb like a fox, I say! You've always been in banking?"

Allenby took refuge in vagueness "No no, I was in the war—served with the British a while, then in the A. E. F. You were over, too?"

"Sure thing. Was in the field in the 42nd Division, but that's not where I've heard of you. It wasn't long ago." C. Townley Ward studied his gray-haired companion with a frankly puzzled look, then muttered, "I'll come to me later so —always does."

Then as his gaze sought a girl seated across a few spaces ahead, his eye kindled. "Good ad for the fair sex, isn't she? Looks like the boys were right."

"About what, Mr. Ward?"

"They said if you shake a tree in Bermuda a half dozen pretty girls fall out of it."

Scrub Machines Draw Coyne Fire

Dorchester Solon Says They Were Found Unsatisfactory Years Ago

A recommendation by the special commission on taxation and public expenditures that "housekeeping" methods in the State House be modernized, and the services of the 55 scrubwomen now employed, be dispensed with in favor of scrubbing machines, drew fire from State Representative Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester today.

Machines were tried in the State House a quarter of a century ago and were found "unsatisfactory," Coyne said

To deprive the State House scrubwomen of the miserable pittance they now receive," Coyne declared would be "an added cruelty and must un wise" action ever recommended

The commission itself, while seeking to "save" the state money by "firing" scrubwomen, "has spent $85,000 of the taxpayers' money Coyne asserted

SCRUBWOMEN SCORNFUL

"The State of Massachusetts must be a pretty hard up," one of them said scornfully

Another remarked

"The machines work pretty good in long hallways or on big bare floors, but how about the rest of the work" Floor scrubbing machines won't clean moulding and window sills and baseboards, or dust off desks, or straighten up the room. We do a lot more than just scrub floors.

The commission is going to offset the cost of a proposed $1,000,000 addition to the State House.

Transfers of many department quarters are also recommended

CROWDED QUARTERS

Crowded conditions in the present we fare department rooms and decried "shameful, public health hazards."

In to recommending the proposed new $1,000,000 wing the report said the capitol building itself is in danger of fire hazards. A bond issue was suggested for erecting the $1,000,000 to be paid off in ten years.

Museum-Looter Suspect Held In $10,000

Charged with breaking and entering and thefts from three Belmont homes, Theodore Olsen, jobless painter, of Cambridge, police asserted looter of Peabody Museum at Harvard, was held in $10,000 today in East Cambridge court for the grand jury.

Only three Belmont charges were lodged today in court against the man who assertedly tole, police He looted priceless art objects from the homes to save his wife and children from starving.

The story of Olsen, who pleaded guilty to all three charges, was looked upon askance by police who produced a record showing that he had served a term in Concord Reformatory for burglary, being released on December 15, 1934 and that he was arrested again the following year on a similar charge

Olsen was arrested in Providence, Saturday, when he sought to pawn monogrammed silver

At her home in Garden street Mrs. Olsen voiced her intention to stick by her husband

"Whatever has happened, it isn't his fault," she said, driving her tears so that she could comfort her three children, Richard, three; Barbara, two, and Marie, 14 months.

"He hasn't worked in four months, and we couldn't get on the WPA or relief. Our relatives have been supporting us."

Woburn Police Shy at Caging Drunks

Despite indications that Woburn police may refuse to obey orders to place drunks in an illuminated lion's cage, Mayor William E. Kane today pushed his plans to shame the town's inebriates as promote temperance

"No it won't be gilded," said the mayor. "We may have some birds in it but it'll be no gilded cage."

Fear of civil suits was said to be cause of unwillingness among Woburn policemen to carry out Mayor Kane's campaign. Both the mayor and the Massachusetts Police Association, which meets at the Parker House Wednesday, promise aid to any officer seized in legal difficulties in carrying out his orders.

Asked if it were true that city employes had been forbidden to go into bar rooms, Mayor Kane replied

"No, it's not true It isn't how they go in that concerns me, but how they come out."

Coughlin Flays U. S. Commissars In Air Talk

DETROIT, Feb. 28—"Concentration of wealth in the hands of commissars—commissars of politics or commissars of finance."

To a correspondent who urged a "national party for labor," Father Coughlin answered

"My own voice will never be raised in campaigning for a labor party or any other party until I am assured that the leaders of a proposed party not only pledge themselves to the principals of Christianity but prove themselves first my practicing these principals"

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

Some new schedule slants shape up for setting forth here today. Two well known turns are being subjected to important time switches.

You'll find Boake Carter and his accent getting the air there (WEEI) when 6:30 strikes, starting for changed sponsorship. Likewise the rollicky rural lads known as "Lum and Abner" move into the 6:45 to 7 o'clock (WEEI) quarter hour for a Monday, Wednesday and Friday fling henceforth until midsummer.

Other than that it strikes me that interest will be wide in connection with the re-action of a day (WEEI) to be coast to coasted between 9 and 10 o'clock this evening. It is "Forsaking All Others" and the filmland stars picked to portray the leading roles are Betty Davis and Joel McCrea. Both are making return engagements in the sequel to the smash hit they scored in "Dangerous." Also in the cast are Jean Muir, Donald Woods, Ruth Donnelly, Eric Blore and Frank McHugh.

AUSTEN LAKE

Shadow & Substance:

A Whirl on the Wheel of Sport

JACK DEMPSEY, NOTED GOURMET and culinary expert, is in Boston today to launch a new brand of liquid nourishment which comes in dimpled bottles and bears his own seal and crest. Heavy doses of the stuff might create the Dempsey fighting spirit but are not guaranteed to produce any of the old champion's fistic knack . . . Eric McNair, disgruntled Red Sox infielder, is sure to notice discrepancies in Eddie Collins' latest statement. Collins, just returned from the Pacific coast, says: (1) "We are through bargaining with McNair. His contract stands—not a penny more"; (2) "My purpose in visiting the coast was to settle the Ted Williams affair. His parents felt they were entitled to part of his purchase price. I handed them a check for $2500 and it tickled their hearts." Now, whether McNair is justified in his demand, he is certain to insist that, as an established major leaguer, he is worth at least as much of an increase as the club peeled off in bankroll for the papa and mamma of a minor league neophyte. Eric's 1938 increase is $500 . . .

AUSTEN LAKE

Johnny Broaca, runaway pitcher from the New York Yankees, was quoted from Lowell as saying he holds no grudge against his former club. Quick response from Manager Joe McCarthy is, "That takes a load off my mind. Only I wish Johnny had pardoned us before the last World Series. Then we mightn't have blown up and lost a game to the Giants' . . .

Cliff's Echo, Terry-fie, Modest Casey

IN A BELATED AND HYSTERICAL ATTEMPT to regain Cliff Battles, Washington Redskin grid star lately signed by Columbia as backfield coach at $5000 a season, owner George Marshall hoiked his ante to $7500 and a two-year contract. The Cliff's dying answer echoed, "No" . . .

The adroit manner in which Bill Terry is handling the case of hard-luck pitcher, Clyde Castleman, who has asked more time to recuperate before reporting for training, recalls Bill's pesky obduracy when he was a holdout during the late John McGraw's managership. It is an example of the old adage, "How a minority, seizing authority, reaching majority, hates a minority" . . .

Modestly Casey Stengel predicts fifth place for his Boston Bees in the 1938 N. L. race. This is the quintessence of managerial humility. Pilots and newsmen are paid to guess high . . . Wouldn't it be smart politics for Judge Dooley, present dictator at Narragansett, to effect an "understanding" with Walter E. O'Hara, deposed and embittered race czar? As one of the chief Republican puppeteers of Rhode Island, Dooley could use O'Hara to split Gov. Quinn's Democratic ticket in the coming election. Is it unthinkable? . . .

Twilight of a Sport God

AFTER BEING A FINANCIAL DERELICT not long ago, Jim Thorpe, the old Indian football immortal, is making a cozy penny by furnishing sport teams, guaranteed technically expert, to Hollywood film producers who require a well-coached athletic unit to complete the illusion. Jim catches and coaches 'em puss'nuly . . .

Laugh of the radio week: (Scene, preamble to the Louis-Mann fight. Mann enters ring amid loud applause). Radio voice—"They're certainly giving the New Haven boy a grand reception" (loud and raucous boos as Louis enters). Radio voice—"And what a handsome welcome they're giving the champion, too." What price ears? . . .

Laconic model: Upon receiving Bill Terry's telegram to start immediately for Hot Springs training or be fired as a Giant coach, Cuban Dolph Luque filed this terse gem, "Don't intend to report—Luque." Get it, Bill? . . . Departure of the Red Sox for Florida at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow places a heavy strain on the journalists and athletes who make the train. Practically the dead of night . . .

Latest bulletin on Olympic hickers: "If the 1940 Olympics are held in Japan I will have nothing to do with the American team"—Lawson Robertson, coach of our last three Olympic teams. "It would be good taste if Mr. Robertson waits until he is invited"—Daniel Ferris, U. S. Olympic executive. So, mutiny, huh?

Absent Owner, and True-Blue-Lou

AFTER EACH VICTORY NEXT SUMMER the Chicago Cubs will fly a white pennant over the grandstand and after each defeat a blue one. In yachting circles a white burgee means "Crew at dinner," a blue one "Owner absent." Why not, in cases of protested games, a red flag claiming "foul" . . .

Risky departure for the Boston hockey Bruins are the two exhibition games scheduled during the white heat of the Cup drive, at St. Louis, March 4, against the Fliers, and at West Point, March 11, against the Army. Just a pleasant relaxation for the athletes in pushing some pucks while the management kicks a few nickels . . .

Finally realizing his own inadequacy in handling his own fight affairs, Tommy Farr has agreed to pay 12½ per cent of his ring earnings to Joe Gould in return for Joe's merchandising service. Tommy offered a munificent 5 per cent. Gould asked a modest 20 per cent. They split their differences, amid, need one add, the anguished convulsions of the Welshman's bankroll . . .

Being a Christian kind of a gent Lou Little stipulated Lud Wray as first assistant to Herb Kopf when he got his former aide the head football job at Manhattan University. Thus, by helping the unemployed Wray to a $5000 post, Little has heaped coals of kindly fire on the head of a gentleman who double-crossed him in the headcoachship at Penn some years ago. Lou is that sort.

PUNCHING AWAY. Only this time at a bag to get into shape. Word was whispered about that Lawrence's Johnny Broaca was headed for the ring but, according to Johnny, he is interested in baseball only.

THE OLD STANDBY. The indoor rowing machine gets a real workout as Johnny mans the slides. The Yankee hurler (if he still is) claims he is in fine shape.

CHECKING UP. Johnny Broaca tightens his laces to make certain there will be no mishaps once he starts working. The Lawrence boy is really serious this year.

Cronin Leads Sox South Tomorrow

By BILL GRIMES

One more day, and Joe Cronin will start on his fourth southern trip as manager of the Red Sox. Manager Joe is in Washington, where he will join the Boston delegation about 6 o'clock tomorrow evening.

At 8:30 tomorrow morning, Sec Ph. Troy, arrived in his most dazzling sartorial splendor, will have checked and double checked his consignment of companions and turned them over to Bill Caldwell, the veteran porter who has been receiving Red Sox parties to Southern training camps since the days that the club was owned by Harry Frazee.

As far as the members of the Red Sox family is concerned, Sec Troy's party will be composed of managers one coach, Tommy Daly, one scout, Hughie Duffy; one player, Ted Olson, and one trainer, Win Green, when the Orange Blossom (West Coast) Special pulls out of the South Station.

WHERE'S WAGNER?

However, there will be 22 in the two Red Sox cars. Dr. William Ross, Frank Reynolds, Jim Barry, Arthur Murphy and Nathan Krocks will be the royal rooters, and the rest of the party will consist of newspapermen.

At Providence, Gene Desautels, who "wintered" at his old home down in Quinebaug, Conn., will climb aboard the train, and Tom Yawkey will visit the party during the short stopover in the Penn Station in New York.

Mose "Lefty" Grove and Herb Pennock are supposed to be with Joe Cronin when the Orange Blossom Special reaches Washington. According to the best available information, there will be no more new comers until Jacksonville.

Charlie Wagner, a rookie pitcher who was with Minneapolis last season, lives in Reading, Pa., a hop, skip and a jump from Philadelphia, and must be going to Sarasota by dog sled, for no mention of his joining the Boston group has been revealed.

MARCUM MAY GO

In all probability, there will be a half dozen Red Sox waiting at Jacksonville, Wednesday noon.

Bill Bayles, a collegian, with a fine reputation as a hurler, streamlined out of Portland, Ore., last Thursday for Chicago and is expected to be at Jax, as are Emerson Dickman, Dick Midkiff, Jim Bagby, Jr., Jim Henry and Wagner.

There have been many changes made in the battery roster since last spring. The Farrell brothers, Rick and Wes, have departed, along with Rube Walberg, Stewart Bowers and Jack Russell, who refused to sign a year ago.

Two of last year's pitching staff, Johnny Marcum and Archie McKain are holding out. And, according to no less an authority than General Manager Eddie Collins, they will either sign at the terms offered or remain out of the family.

Neither Marcum nor McKain did anything last season that warrants holding out, especially as they were both tendered salary increases, according to Collins. Marcum won 13 and lost 11 while McKain's record was 8 and 8.

During the past two seasons, Marcum has lost three more games than he has won for the Red Sox, but Johnny is not good on figures so he apparently cannot remember beyond the 1937 campaign.

ONLY MAY GO, TOO

McKain broke into the big league last year as a "spot" pitcher and didn't show to any great advantage.

Now that there are no strings attached to either Emerson Dickman or Dick Midkiff, Manager Cronin will give this pair plenty of attention.

A year ago, they trained with the Sox at Sarasota but they had been promised to the Little Rock club of the Southern Association. When they departed, they left a gap in the pitching corps which Cronin never did plug.

Much is expected of Charlie Wagner, who won 20 and lost 14 for the Minneapolis Millers, and they

New Stance Pleases Fletcher

'I'll Add 50 Points to Batting Mark,' He Predicts

By JOE CASHMAN

BRADENTON, Fla., Feb. 28—Elbie Fletchers' Friday team have changed no Monday dress.

Following the Bees' first workout on Sunday last, Milton's pride was the most despondent player in camp.

He had just received his baptism of fire under Manager Casey Stengel. He had discarded his old style at bat in favor of the new Stengel stride.

He had missed the ball more often than he had hit it and, when he had connected, he had pulled every drive — the fault the new stance was supposed to correct.

He hadn't hidden his disappointment or resentment either.

"I can't do anything this way," he had cried once, "I don't meet the ball nearly so often and, when I do, it still goes to right field."

Today, this same Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser's gift to the Swarm is the happiest youth in Manatee County.

His face wreathed in smiles, he's around predicting he'll add 50 odd points to his freshman stick mark of last season and join the ranks of the .300 hitters.

FEELS AT HOME, NOW

That optimism began to bud in the Saturday sessions, Elbie still felt awkward up at the platter, but he was connecting more consistently, and an average of one out of three of his belts went to dead or left center.

ELBIE FLETCHER

It remained for the Sunday drill though, to convince him fully that he really had something in the Stengel stride.

For as fast as the pitchers served the Fletcher hudsoon not only contacted the apple but sent it whistling straight down the left field foul line more often than anywhere else.

"I thought I'd never get used to the change," the brilliant kid first sacker admitted this morning, "but already I feel as natural as though I had been swinging that way all my life.

Johnny Broaca Ready to Pitch Again, But Nobody Seems to Care

Red Sox Draw Line On Johnny Broaca

'Not Interested,' Says Collins -- Belongs To Yankees, Who Haven't Forgiven Him for Walk-out Last Year

The Lawrence modern hurler who dropped out of sight during the pennant race last year and who was ruled out of baseball by the Yankees wants to come back.

He has been working out fairly for the past month. In fact he is planning to join Boston Evening American regulars after a real workout Johnny charged.

"My arm is in great shape once more, and I know baseball can always use a good pitcher.

"I would like more than anything to sign with one of the Boston clubs. I know I could turn in a good job."

But Eddie Collins is not the least bit interested in Broaca. When asked if he could use Johnny, the Red Sox business manager said:

"Broaca is out of baseball. Before anybody could consider him, Johnny would have to be reinstated. Furthermore, he is the property of the Yankees. They can do what they wish. I'm not interested."

Word from what can be learned in the Yankees are not greatly interested either. They still have Ed Durning for being A.W.O.L. during the pennant race last season when they needed hurlers badly.

That in brief is the story Johnny wants to come back but he must first make his peace with the Yankees. And right now it looks rather tough.

Champ Wings Only Two Points Behind Hawks

Confident They Still Can Gain Berth In Playoffs

By MURRAY KRAMER

It a the uncertainty that makes hockey what it is

Yesterday s champions can be the cellar occupant of today

They not only can be, but in fact they are. We need look no further than Detroit Red Wings who are now on route to Boston for a tussle with our league leading Bruins tomorrow night.

Just a year ago, the Wings occupied the same lofty position the Rosemen hold today. Jack Adams and his boys went on to win the Stanley Cup and were the toast of the hockey world.

Today, though the cold figures show Detroit has won only nine games and tied ten against 20 losses.

NEED WIN HERE

Yet, there is no discouragement in the Detroit camp. Even though they look up to the rest of the league right now, they are cocky enough to believe that the count is only three and two and that they can still pickle that last ball right over the fence for the championship.

By playing Canadiens to a tie while the Rangers walloped Chicago, the Wings picked up a valuable point and are on two points behind the third place Black Hawks today.

Thus a victory over the Bruins tomorrow night will deadlock the Detroit outfit with Bill Stewart's bunch and give them an excellent opportunity to get into the playoffs.

Detroit's chances of entering the post-season clashes are better than good for they are a much greater team than the wins and losses show.

Those many mishaps and injuries that have wrecked the Motor City team all year are now history. For the first time this season those Red Wings are really at full strength and it's a team with all its power can make trouble for any of them.

And you may give the Bruins plenty of it when Showdown night comes down at the North Station trapshed.

FEARS LETDOWN

It so happens that the Bruins are pretty much as far as the American division leadership concerned and there is a chance that the boys will not be up to their pace.

For Mr. Ross promises no such thing as lapses.

In fact he intends to keep his club keyed up through the balance of the schedule for he fears that if they should let down they might not recover their peak form in the championships.

Except for the locals is in top shape, and they will all take their regular turn tomorrow night.

So, it's a question of a desperate Red Wing team meeting a Bruin outfit that is trying to continue its peak performances. Sounds as if there may be a pretty fair game at that.

One familiar face which will be missing tomorrow night is that of Win Green, the Bruins popular trainer. Win leaves tomorrow for the Southland to take over his new duties as Red Sox trainer. The gang hate to see him go but are all rooting for him.

Jack Adams is really on the warpath. Bert McCaffrey had to chase him from the bench last night for using "abusive language." Adams in stopping at nothing, and it looks like heads will roll for those officials tomorrow night.

Odd as it may seem, the fact remains that Art Ross is still after better performances from the Bruins. He was he conducted yesterday's practice session one would thing the B's were in the cellar.

If the Red Wings do well against the Bruins tomorrow and the Rangers Thursday, you can expect to see Bill Stewart get an early start South to take up his major league umpiring.

Bees Buzzing In Dixie

"Casey" with the bats walks from the clubhouse ready for a lively training session at the Bees' camp in Florida. Manager Stengel, returning to the big league wars after a year's layoff, figures his Boston entry will finish no worse than fifth place.

LOU FETTE JIM TURNER

Twirling twins of the Bees National League baseball team, Lou Fette and Jim Turner, get together to watch the squad practice a t the training camp in Brandenton, Florida. Last year, the two rookie hurlers combined to turn in 40 victories for the Quinn club against 21 losses.

Training Camp Gossip

By Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La.—Billy Terry faced a stiffer task than his players today as the New York Giants began the second stage of their training. Dick Bartell and Joe Moore, the club's most determined holdouts, were expected to come to camp with the rest of the infielders and outfielders, and Bill's job was to persuade them to sign contracts. During a ten-day visit at Hot Springs, Ark., the size of the heftiest hurlers was reduced considerably.

ST PETERSBURG, Fla.—Although holdouts Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing were noticeably missing, the New York Yankees' squad received two additions as it began its training chores. Tommy Henrich who wants to strengthen his knee which was operated on during the winter, and Jake Powell, another outfielder, received permission to start with the batterymen.

NEW ORLEANS—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians held a long conference with Rollie Hemsley, catcher newly obtained from the St. Louis Browns, and announced Hemsley had promised to behave this season. Vitt said he would tell the team that an automatic fine of $500 would be slapped on any member caught drinking with Hemsley.

TAMPA, Fla.—Pitcher Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Reds' hurler, was reported ready to take a job as a golf pro at Sarasota unless the Reds legs meet his salary demands. Meanwhile Manager Bill McKechnie planned a long practice session today.

ORLANDO, Fla.—Monte Weaver, a 12-game winner last year, is back in the Washington Senators' fold after having signed a contract calling for a $1500 raise. Manager Bucky Harris declared he hoped to find at least two big league pitchers in his rookie staff.

LAKE CHARLES La.—The rest of the Philadelphia Athletics squad, long Outfielder Wally Moses, who is a holdout, was due to arrive today. Connie Mack will divide the squad into two groups, holding practice for one in the morning and working the other in the afternoon in preparation for the A's exhibition game with the Giants Saturday.

BILOXI, Miss.—Manager Jimmy Willson of the Phillies isn't worrying about the failure of Dolph Camilli, Philadelphia's big first baseman, to report to training camp. "He didn't report last year until the club got home," said Jimmy, "and then he hustled right in and had the biggest season of his career."

CATALINA ISLAND, Calif.—Despite the fact a rainstorm halted yesterday's workout, Manager Charlie Grimm is confident the Chicago Cubs' rookie hurlers will be ready to test the veteran hitters when the regulars arrive Thursday.

LAKELAND, Fla. — Manager Mickey Cochrane, most of his Detroit Tiger pitchers and several other players already are in camp, although it doesn't open officially until next Sunday. Schoolboy Rowe is among those here and is trying out his ailing arm.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla.—The St Louis Cardinals' professors are busy at the team's baseball school getting pupils Don Padgett and Terry Moore ready for the spring training camp opening at St. Petersburg, Wednesday. Padgett, an outfielder, is studying to be a catcher, and Moore, also an outfielder, is a would-be third baseman.

If Rogers has come along, McKain would have a tough time holding his job, for it's questionable if Cronin will retain more than two southpaws, and "Lefty" Grove is a fixture.

Long Jim Bagley, son of the former Cleveland hurler, who was on the winning end of 21 games with Mazelton last season, has a chance, according to the experts.

Fritz Ostermueller, who has been with the Red Sox for three years, has not been heard from since, shortly after his arm operation.

Nothing is known of his condition and, from the silence which prevails at Fenway Park when his name comes up, it would seem that the veteran southpaw is on his way out.

McNAIR, CRAMER

Cronin will have his batterymen out bright and early Thursday morning for the initial workout of the season.

Although no direct word has been received here, it is said that Jimmy Foxx is at Sarasota, having gone to Florida direct from Hot Springs, Va.

Moe Berg is also in the Sunshine State, basking in the sun over at West Palm Beach, with some of the boys. He'll be at Tim Ford's Hotel Sarasota Terrace when Cronin and his delegation detrains at the Seaboard station Wednesday night.

The rest of the squad will be drifting into camp all week, and the entire corps is due March 8.

Within the next week, Eric McNair and Roger Cramer will either come to terms or be disposed of by Eddie Collins.

They are good trading material and, if they are not satisfied with their Red Sox salaries, it will be better for all concerned if they are passed along to some other club.

Traveling Salesman Tipped Nats Off To Speedball King, Walter Johnson

Washington Immortal Faced Tigers Only Four Days After Leaving Idaho Sandlots

By JOE CASHMAN

BRADENTON, Fla., Feb. 28—Back in 1907, when Washington was first in peace, first in war and last in the American League, a traveling salesman, whose name has been lost to posterity, appointed himself a seeker of talent for the lowly Senators.

His peregrinations soon after, carried him to Idaho. And there he sighted a pitcher.

Upon his return to the Capital, he resorted to the late Joe Cantillon, then piloting the nondescript Nats.

"I've found you the greatest pitcher in the world," he announced.

Cantillon heard a similar pronouncement at least once every week of his long career; so has every other big league manager before and since.

MANAGER UNIMPRESSED

But such informants must be humored, Boss Joe had to feign interest.

"Who is this phenom, and where does he play?" he asked.

"I saw him throw, and I'm telling you he can make all your twirlers toss their gloves into the Potomac," replied the drummer.

For, he told himself, even if every eagle eye in the big league scout army had overlooked such a "find," which would be highly improbable, some minor league club in the vicinity would be certain to hear of his prowess and sign him.

In other words, he reasoned the "greatest pitcher in the world" or even a pitcher worthy of a minor league trial couldn't possibly be found in semi-pro ranks.

But he didn't say so to the self appointed ivory hunter.

"DRUMMER" PERSISTENT

What's the idea?" he demanded. "The greatest pitcher in the world is still in Idaho, and your palookas continue to lose with sickening regularity.

"No," admitted the manager. "As a matter of fact, I forgot all about your boy, what with all the other worries I have.

"I promised, however, I'll have somebody out there to see him in the next week or two."

"You had better," warned the salesman. "If I find him there on my next trip, I'll tip off some other club about him, and you'll lose the greatest pitcher the game has ever seen."

Cantillon was stalling against time. If he spoke his mind, he had said he would send a scout way out to Idaho to see a sandlotter recommended by President Ted Roosevelt.

"BLANK" KNEW TALENT

Fate, however, caused him to change his mind.

A few days following the second interview Cliff Blankenship, Senators' catcher, suffered a minor injury, which physicians said would keep him out of action for about ten days. He could get around but he couldn't play.

There was a chance in a million that the salesman's hero might have possibilities. Blankenship, a catcher, would know. He couldn't play for a spell. He might as well be scouting as loafing.

"If you think he's a prospect, report in what minor league classification you think he might go. We'll take care of the rest."

ALL IS FORGIVEN

About ten days later, Blankenship returned. With him was a big raw-boned kid, whom he introduced as Walter Johnson.

"Blankenship," he bellowed Cantillon. "You blankety-blank so-and-so "Can't you understand the English language? You were told to have no contact whatever with this rookie.

"Here you've brought him all the way from Idaho at our expense, and now we'll have to go to the added expense of shipping him back somewhere. What's the idea?"

"I saw him make one pitch, and from that moment on I lived in mortal fear somebody else would steal him before I could get him here," explained Blankenship.

"Poppycock," roared the pilot. "No kid is that good. But I'll soon find out. You can bet I won't waste any more money on him keeping him around if he don't belong."

Within three or four days Walter Perry Johnson, fresh from the sandlots, was pitching for the Senators against the Detroit Tigers.

GAVE SIX HITS

It was the afternoon of Aug. 2, 1907. Johnson was 19 at the time. He was facing a Bengal lineup that included such wows as Ty Cobb, Sam Crawford and Ed Rousman.

He didn't win, but it wasn't his fault. He limited those bashers of Bengals to six hits as he rendered 3 to 2

Cantillon kissed Barkeeper [illegible] both cheeks, stuck a pen and contract in the pitcher's hand and cut a check for the first time in salesman

Thus did Walter Perry Johnson first pitch to be elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame make his major league debut.

No other pitcher in baseball history ever made the jump direct from the sandlots to such big league.

That may be due to the fact that probably no pitcher so great as Big Barney ever flashed across the diamond horizon.

WINNER FROM START

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

I do not believe Gordon's claims in behalf of Samara are justified, but I was surprised to learn Casey had called upon the "color line" defense. When Casey became world's champion by trouncing youthful Louis Thesz at the Garden, he declared he would meet all-comers, and there was not any mention at that time that a challenger would be barred because he was a Negro.

Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion, has also drawn the "color line," but in his case he is banning heavyweights of his own color from a crack at the title. Louis is quite frank in declaring he does not believe a championship match between two colored heavyweights would draw enough money to pay off the ushers. Joe says he will only clash with white contenders.

Until Casey became heavyweight wrestling champion the ruler of the mat game has never had occasion to draw the "color line" in view of the fact that until now there has not been an outstanding colored heavyweight.

George Godfrey once ventured into the wrestling wars in quest of the title, but he was knocked off quickly by the late Stanley Stasiak in a bout held in Montreal. This exploded Godfrey's title dreams as a wrestler.

Samara has come a long ways as a contender. I do not believe he classes with Casey as a wrestler. It is my opinion the Irishman would be able to defeat the Gordon grappler, but if big Steve refuses to risk a meeting with Samara there are many persons who are going to claim that fear of defeat prompts his decision.

Casey should sign to meet Samara, and by knocking off Seelie prove he wasn't merely talking for publicity purposes when he stated he could conquer all comers on the mat.

Polish Champion to Come to U. S.

STANLEY Zbyszko, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion during his recent visit to Boston told me he is going to Henri-Deglane, champion of France, middleweight champion, to this United States. Chmielewski first attracted attention when the 17-year-old boy he won the middleweight Olympic boxing championship at Stockholm, Sweden.

Chmielewski visited the United States a year ago with a Polish team that competed in Chicago and in Kansas City, and he proved a sensation.

The Polish middleweight later toured in Rome, where he won over the leading middleweights in Europe. He was presented with a special gold medal by Mussolini.

Zbyszko tells me Chmielewski is a pretty nice boy to know. I told Zbyszko that if the Polish youngster does half as well in the ring as Zbyszko did, he will be a welcome addition to the boxing picture in this country.

Random Shots at Target

AL McCOY, New England heavyweight champion, is planning to do some of his future training at Lou Stumpf's Gym in New York where he will have the advantage of more and better sparring partners than he is able to secure in this city . . . There is a dearth of heavyweight sparring partners . . . Most of the big fellows who work as sparring partners refuse to move away from New York . . . Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Club is making plans to fit McCoy into his heavyweight program . . . McCoy is in a spot to secure a title bout with Joe Louis if he can avoid meeting with defeat.

The ten-round bout between Frank Zanelli of Providence and George Martin of South End at the Garden on Friday night should be a stirring affair . . . Both youngsters like to punch, and they are certain to be blazing away with their best Sunday wallops every second they are in the ring . . . The special eight-round tussle between Salvatore Barbolo of East Boston and George Haas of Worcester should be an interesting affair . . . Haas has a decision over Barbolo who he shows brilliant form in his last two starts.

George Martin, pride of Castle Square in the South End, is confident he'll halt the victory streak of Ralph The Ripper Zanelli in the feature 10-round bout of the Goodwin A. C. boxing show at the Boston Garden next Friday night, figuring he's got the "Indian sign" on The Ripper.

"I believed Zanelli plenty in amateur days, and he knows I can whip him," said Martin at the finish of a brisk workout at Harry Kelley's gym. "That's why he's been dodging me for so long.

"Zanelli is going to be more cautious than in most of his fights Friday night, and that's where I'll beat him.

"He knows if I hit him he'll go down, and he'll have to take a hitch in what is called his 'whirlwind style.'"

BOTH TOP NOTCHERS

Martin and Zanelli, two of the best in recent years to be graduated from local amateur ranks and fiber rivals from simon pure days have both hit the high spots practically from the start.

Zanelli has been unbeaten in more than 30 professional bouts, Martin has won 19 of 20 professional starts.

Zanelli is one of the fastest and most clever welterweight fighters in recent seasons hereabouts, for Zanelli and Martin are renewing an old feud and both are determined to win by knockouts.

Both can hit solidly enough to stop the other, and there's a strong possibility the bout will end in a knockout.

BARTOLO VS. HAAS

In another eight, Salvatore Barbolo of East Boston will battle Newsboy Eddie Haas of Worcester. Barbolo looked great in his last two starts, beating Tony Costa and Sammy Garcia. Haas recently beat Bartolo and Sauya via out for revenge.

Sykes will be Irish Billy Conner, Jarmon Plain, vs. Louis Rico, Providence, and Tony Bent, Cambridge, vs. Young Byron, Roxbury.

Stage Hand Will Race at Suffolk

Stage Hand, winner of the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby, together with the stablemate, The Chief from the stables of Maxwell Howard, and trained by the famous Earle Sands, are definitely coming to Suffolk Downs as entrants in the $15,000 Yankee Handicap to be run here June 18.

Secretary Jim Monroe yesterday wired Eastern Racing officials here that the horses were definitely coming and great pleasure was expressed by Chairman C. F. Adams and President James E. Connors.

Sands's record as a jockey which placed him among the list of immortals, bids fair to be eclipsed even by his record as a trainer of champions and the very presence of the king of veteran jockeys will in itself lend color and that much talked of atmosphere.

Boxer vs. Grappler Feature at Arena

Whether a boxer can beat a wrestler has long been a moot question. It has been tried several times with the victories sometimes for the wrestlers and often times for the boxer.

On Wednesday night at the Arena a mixed bout will be presented between Pat Schaffer of California and Frankie Woods, former heavyweight boxer. The affair will be staged 10 rounds, with three minutes of action and one minute of rest.

The main bout will bring together Art O'Mahoney and Mike Casey, both of Ireland.

'Open' Contestants In Bowling Event Named Thursday

American-American Tourney Board From All Six N. E. States, Plans Luncheon Date at Lenox

The third annual Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser grand candlepin bowling championship tournament to be held at the spacious Huntington Club's 66 alleys from March 26 through April 9, is already well launched.

But even more impetus will be given it Thursday when representatives from every section of New England meet, as a tourney committee, over the festive board at Hotel Lenox at 1 p. m.

This committee will decide all matters of tourney importance and specifically will name those prominent men and women bowlers who will be entered in "open competition."

This official list of "open" class bowlers will represent the stars of the game who will be limited to the "open" competition. They are men and women who have gained outstanding distinction through the years.

Added to these will be all alley owners, proprietors and employes who will likewise meet in this division.

ONE CLASS ONLY

However, to keep the record straight, any bowler, regardless of classification or past performances, may enter the "open" class if he or she so desires. But in this event they must forego the amateur competition. For one person may enter but ONE division.

Jack Stafford, manager of the Huntington Club alleys, will be host to the American-Advertiser tourney committee and will act as chairman of the dinner meeting.

The committee is to be composed of James Ennis, Jefferson Alleys, Pittsfield; Mike DiCarlo, Rockingham Alleys, Springfield, Carl Gustafson, Strand Alleys, Worcester, Johnny Tagg, Putnam Alleys, Fitchburg; Jimmy Ross, Recreation Alleys, Lawrence; Jimmy Dindy, Quincy Square Alleys, Quincy; Joe Grant, Eagle Alleys, Roxbury; Joe Hynes, and Archie Walsh, Twentieth Century Alleys, Boston. In the open competition every cent of entry fees will be returned in the form of cash prizes to be divided according to the rating of the respective entries.

The tourney this year promises to make candlepin history. With the appearance of the top flight bowlers into a competition of their own, championship amateur bowling in our six New England states

B. C. Six Plays Tech, Huskies

Both Games Carded At Arena

Boston Colleges rejuvenated hockey sextet will go down the home stretch this week, meeting Tech tomorrow night, and Northeastern on Friday evening, both games at the Arena.

Spurred on by their victory over the highly favored Boston University sextet on last Friday night, the Eagles look for a fairly easy win over the Engineers.

Dame Fortune hadn't smiled on the Eagle puck chasers until last Friday night as far as winning any major battles was concerned, but they hope to capture their next two in the same fashion as against the Terriers.

The team will be considerably bolstered by the return of Bill "Lefty" Flynn, stellar pivot man on the first forward wall, who was out of the last game with a broken

Captain Joe Hartigan, still ailing from his spine injury, and Frank Lowery, another first string forward, who suffered a broken hand will be lost for the remainder of the season.

Friday night's tilt with Northeastern will be the more interesting of the games as far as the Eagles are concerned, for they are out to trounce the Huskies, after a 9-7 set-back received from them earlier in the year.

Emery completed the round three under par to climax what had been for him a rough journey to the title.

In the qualifying round, Emery just managed to get into match play when he was forced to a playoff. The first round saw him pitted against Reynold Smith who had a brilliant 69.

It took Emery 18 holes to down Jack Munger and then he had to repeat that performance against Willie Maguire Jr. He likewise was forced to the limit of his ability to eliminate Harry Todd in the semi-final.

Green After Title Tonight

Win Over Lions to Mean Hoop Crown

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP)—Dartmouth's Indians with an assist from Columbia, can settle the Eastern Intercollegiate League basketball title chase within the next 48 hours.

The Big Green, league leaders since early in the season, faces Princeton's last-place quintet at Princeton tonight, and Harvard, in second place and the only team with a real chance to overhaul the Indians, meets Columbia in the pink-bound Lion gym, Tuesday night.

Chief interest in the league centers in the race for scoring honors. Carl Wilson, Cornell center, overhauled Dartmouth's Will Thomas during the week by scoring 22 points in two games to lead by a point. Wilson has 100 points and Thomas 99 with Tom Rich of Cornell in third place with 85.

Pittsburgh and Penn State are the only teams in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference race with a vital interest in the proceedings. Penn State is at present runner-up to Temple, which clinched the title last week, while Pittsburgh, a perennial power in the conference, is the only team with a chance to overhaul the Nittany Lions.

Stocks Extend Early Decline Dealings Slow From Start

Expel Wright From Five Exchanges

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (INS)—The SEC today expelled one broker from all registered stock exchanges and suspended two others for manipulating the securities of the Kinner Airplane and Motor Corporation, Ltd., on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange.

Charles C. Wright, a partner of the brokerage firm of Wright & Seaton was expelled, while Norman Stern and Hebert King, formerly co-partners of the firm of Arnold & Co., were suspended for 12 months.

MEEHAN ACTION SIMILAR

Wright is the second broker expelled from the nation's exchanges by the commission within a week, given power to police stock trading. A year ago the SEC took similar action against Michael Meehan, spectacular New York market operator.

Wright is a member of the New York Stock, the New York Curb, the Philadelphia Stock and the Chicago Stock exchanges, and the Chicago Board of Trade. King and Stern are members of the New York Stock and Curb exchanges. The firm of Wright and Sexton is not involved in the commission action, Arnold and Company was dissolved last October.

Specifically, the SEC found that Wright was the motivating influence behind a sudden rise in the price of Kinner common stock on the Los Angeles market, through a series of transactions between September 11, 1935, and January 16, 1936. Wright allegedly caused the quotation of Kinner common to jump from an average of 49 cents per share to 75 cents per share.

SUBSTANTIAL DIFFERENCE

"There is clearly a substantial difference in the degree of responsibility between the respondent Wright and the respondents King and Stern," the commission's decision said.

"While the latter were instrumental in negotiating the option on Kinner stock and in securing Wright's participation in its exercise, their role in the subsequent operation, although substantial, was less important than that played by Wright.

"Nevertheless, it is our conviction that the public needs protection against such activities and those guilty of them. The gravity of respondent Wright's conduct in actually manipulating the manipulation is such that in our opinion it is necessary and appropriate for the protection of investors that he be expelled from all of the national securities exchanges of which he is a member."

Slow Recovery Believed

Business sentiment is somewhat better although there are no definite signs of an upturn, states First National Bank of Boston in its current New England letter. Industrial activity, after advancing in January, has shown a slackening tendency since the first of this month. Aggregate production of representative industries is now about 30 per cent below the corresponding period of last year.

In general, considerable readjustment progress has been made. The speculative advances in commodity prices during the 1936-37 period have been largely cancelled. Inventories in most lines have been reduced to a more reasonable level, although in terms of physical volume they are still high. Downward revisions in wage rates have taken place in a few lines, particularly in textiles and the shoe industry, but the general wage structure is not still above 1929. Industrial relations are more satisfactory and a friendlier spirit of co-operation generally exists between business and the government.

The fact remains, however, that following such a sharp decline in production accompanied by heavy unemployment and reduced buying power, some time will be required before there can be a real revival. The necessary confidence to go ahead is still lacking.

Leaders Off I To More Than 3 Points

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—Stocks, down slightly in today's early market proceedings, extended their declines later and a number of leaders yielded 1 to more than 3 points.

Dealings were exceptionally quiet from the start and few large blocks of shares appeared on the slow-moving ticker tape.

Steels, motors, rubbers and farm implements led the backward drift. Oils, utilities and rails were sufficiently resistant to hold losses to fractions.

SHARE LOSSERS

Prominent on the downside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motor, E. I. duPont de Nemours, Allied Chemical, Allis Chalmers, Johns-Manville, Union Carbide and Sears Roebuck.

Stuff gold mines as Dome and McIntyre managed to edge forward.

Bonds and commodities were uneven.

CURRENT TOPICS

Market analysts saw a ray of hope in the survey of the magazine Steel which said some slight improvement in orders for the metal was in evidence which, while spread over various lines, was largely confined to lighter products.

Although warning that a number of deterrent factors must be cleared up before any substantial expansion of demand develops, the review brought seasonal requirements, at least, would give impetus to mill activities.

Purchases of heavy railroad purchases, in the event the freight rate boost is granted, were believed to be the principal buoying influence for steel makers at the moment.

Starting, at the beginning of foreign currency transactions, was off to a good start with $5.19 1-16 French franc was unchanged at 3.27 cents.

Hurley, Murphy Point Danger To Industry

LAWRENCE, Feb. 28—Governor Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts and Governor Francis E. Murphy of New Hampshire threw their executive shoulders to the wheel of protest against the proposed reciprocal trade pact with the United Kingdom here yesterday as speakers on the, fourth radio program sponsored by Mayor Walter A. Griffin and his steering committee.

"This threat in the proposed letting down of tariff barriers on woolens and worsteds," Governor Hurley declared, "is not a threat to labor but also to the manufacturers themselves. Their very existence is at stake.

SERIOUSLY AFFECTED

"I was the first governor of this Commonwealth to call a mass meeting of both employers and employes in fact an industrial emergency. We are mobilizing every resource at our command to fight the passage of this pact destructive to our economic interests.

"Massachusetts is more seriously affected by this threat than any other state in New England. This may be evidently shown by the manufacturers' figures for 1935.

"In that year, of the $45,000,000,000 of manufactured goods in the entire country, $7 per cent were produced in New England, and 4.6 per cent right here in Massachusetts. Of the cotton textile products for the year, 29.1 were produced in New England and 15 per cent in this state.

"In 1936 there were 555 established textile concerns operating in Massachusetts employing 135,000 operatives, turning out products valued at $516,000,000 and paying to our workers $122,000,000 in wages.

"This industry must be saved to us and our state. We must do everything in our power to see that it is not destroyed."

Governor Hurley declared that a perusal of the value of manufactured textiles in Massachusetts towns and cities will show the tremendous importance of the industry. He quoted the following figures representing product values:

Lawrence, $95,000,000; New Bedford, $60,000,000; Fall River, $60,000,000; Lowell, $26,000,000; Worcester, $11,00,000; Holyoke, $12,000,000; Boston, $10,000,000; Methuen, $8,000,000; Needham, $3,000,000; Maiden, $2,000,000.

"We must present the strongest possible protest before the Federal Tariff Commission on March 14," Governor Hurley declared. "Now is the time for us to act. It will be too late when our mills are closed down."

Governor Murphy declared that not more than one person in 1000 in New England realizes the importance of the hearing to be held in Washington, D. C., on March 14.

"Unless the people of this state and New Hampshire wake up, that hearing will be opened and closed and they will be astounded that any serious break has been made in the dike of protective tariff which protects our people from a flood of cheaper merchandise produced by underpaid labor," he said.

LOW WAGES

"It seems to be the reversed adage of some of the leaders in this movement that 'Charity Begins Abroad.' They have so stultified themselves that charity begins in the home should raise their united voices against this proposed trade pact.

"We cannot compete with England-subsidized industries. We know that British labor overseas is paid much less than our workers. Our manufacturers are paying wages which are 150 per cent higher than those paid in the factories of Great Britain."

Governor Murphy traced the industrial growth of the city of Manchester and showed in graphic style per the dependency of its 70,000 inhabitants on the textile and kindred industries.

"The payroll is the lifeblood of these workshop towns and cities of New England," he declared. "We must—WE MUST—see that it is saved."

Plans of New Haven Units Considered

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 (AP)—An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner took testimony today on separate reorganization plans of the Hartford and Connecticut Western, and the Providence, Warren and Bristol Railroads, subsidiaries of the New York, New Haven Railroad.

N. S. Buckingham, New Haven contended the subsidiary companies were seeking better treatment for their minority stockholders than was proposed in the New Haven reorganization plan.

Agreeing the properties of the two railroads should be turned over to the reorganized New Haven, Buckingham asserted "our only objection is to the reorganization we anticipate."

He proposed that minority stockholders of the P. W. and B. should receive four shares of the reorganized New Haven's first preferred stock for each three shares he now owns, instead of the "one for one" basis proposed by the New Haven.

The H. and C. W. plan proposed that minority stockholders receive one share of the reorganized New Haven stock for each three shares of H. and C. W.

James Garfield, Boston, counsel for the New Haven, termed both proposals "inconsistent" and contended only one share of preferred stock of the reorganized road should be given for each seven shares of the minority stock of the subsidiaries.

Examiner H. H. Wilkinson announced that I. C. C. would report on the two proposals in a report dealing with the entire New Haven reorganization.

Would Change Name of New Tax Book

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—The circulation of the new edition of "Tax Systems of the World" which has been prepared under the direction of the New York State tax commission would doubtless be vastly increased if it were called "A Handbook for Tax Dodgers."

Any illicit use of the carefully compiled comings and goings of the tax eaters throughout the universe would of course be a mere by-product. The sponsors have made this vast experiment in fact finding for the commendable purpose of aiding governments to put their fiscal systems on a more scientific plane.

Nevertheless, individuals seeking escape from confiscatory taxes, could find in this extraordinary compendium a guide to the states at home and abroad which are relatively tender toward tax geese about to be plucked.

A Cook's tour through the vast array of factual information indicates that there is no complete escape for those to whom any taxes are obnoxious.

NO ESCAPE

Even in Soviet Russia, where the state itself is nominally supposed to assume the burden for national savings, there is no haven from the ubiquitous tax collector.

After listing the whole array of Soviet taxes, the editor says:

"Those interested in the taxation system of U. S. S. R. should remember that the economic policies of the Soviets are entirely different from those of the capitalist countries. And the tendencies of those policies naturally result in unequal and discriminating attitudes toward different groups of the population and different sectors of the whole industrial life."

Taxes on farms, for example, are levied in kind, and must be paid in quantities of wool, butter and milk, grain, rice, potato and polly seeds at prices fixed by the government.

The nature of exemptions under the personal income tax in the Soviet is unique. Bonuses to workers for excellence and the incomes of national heroes are tax exempt.

According to the chief editor of the Monumental Volume, Mayor S. Howard, inhabitants of the globe in all nations turn over in taxes about one sixth of the total world income each year.

"The world's wealth probably approximates one and one-half trillion dolars" (Each trillion is equal to a million millions, which is quite a lot of money for the public spenders to draw upon.) "The world's income is probably around three hundred billions." (On the basis of this estimate, the United States with but 6½ per cent of the world's population in prosperous years gets about 30 per cent of the world income) "And the world's annual tax bill is probably around fifty billion."

OUTLINES PURPOSE

Mr. Howard, outlining the purpose of this comprehensive survey said:

"The central fact of history is perhaps the Roman republic and empire. What made Rome rank so high and hold together so long? It was not her soldiers, though the best in history. The Romans had the engineering genius for construction and organization.

"This was carried to the ultimate degree in their armies—which were, in fact, marvels of engineering—in their laws, in their aqueduct and highway projects. We have long been in another age of engineers. Theirs is the spirit which has made the twentieth century. And so, this particular plan is conceived and is to be carried forward in harmony with this spirit, as far as possible strictly as an engineering project."

The merit of this important fact finding undertaking is that it sets out information in interrelation to other cognate facts. The manual will be of value to law makers seeking new and additional sources of revenue, but of course its ultimate aim is to demonstrate the basis of a balanced, integrated tax system.

As Mr. Howard aptly puts it:

"The present law is largely the child of past theory; present theory is largely the parent of future law. So an adequate picture requires bringing together in its proper perspective a combined view of the present, the past and the future. Only thus can a balanced judgment adequately soon be derived.

"The power of taxation is not merely the power to destroy. If the forces in control so desire it is the power for unending selection and discrimination as well as destruction. The discrimination may be effected against things which should be discriminated against and in favor of others which should be encouraged, or it may not."

Caution Found - Soundest Policy

Haney Urges to Await Developments In View of Existing Uncertainty

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—Despite shakiness toward the end, the stock market gained last week. The net result was that the composite averages closed somewhere between 1½ and 2½ points above the close of the preceding week.

All but one of the dozen most active stocks moved up a notch, and that one was Chrysler, which did very well to lose but ¾ on the week. The greatest strength was shown by rearmament stocks such as Bethlehem Steel and International Nickel, by motor and rubber stocks such as U. S. Rubber and Yellow Truck, and by railways such as N. Y. Central and Southern Pacific. The rise in International Telephone and Telegraph was significant of prospects for more settled conditions in Europe.

ANOTHER DIP

Broadly speaking, I would say that the market's action suggests nothing worse than another dip to the January low. In fact, while such a dip is quite possible, my guess is that any further reaction here may be held to one or two points, thus indicating further gains in due course.

It should be recognized, however, that great uncertainty exists. The soundest policy is to await developments for a few days. If the composite averages do not decline more than a point or two by Friday, and if they resume the rise and penetrate the January high level, the action would be favorable, and would warrant purchase of selected stocks.

The unfavorable factors are as follows:

1—Signs of losing the upward momentum and rounding off are obvious and suggest distribution. The market failed to go through on Friday, and some selling on strong spots was in evidence.

2—The tendency to run the railway and other stocks up, on the theory that an increase in railway rates will be favorable, is a dangerous one. Probably the announcement of such a raise will bring selling (unless counteracted by more important and really good news.)

3—The business outlook is not stimulating. Dividend omissions and cuts suggest poor first quarter earnings. The depression is still in the phase of reducing inventories, etc.

4—The President does not seem quite ready to do the right thing in the way of positively helping real business recovery. There is still too much of the spirit of passing the buck to "business." No mere "breathing spell" will do, this time.

FAVORABLE FACTORS

1—The charts do not show what looks like a "peak," and the volume of trading shows no climax—rather it has fallen off on the reaction.

4—The market took the Armour and Chrysler dividend omissions very well. In this connection, it is well to remember that there has been no rampant bullishness and that much bearishness has existed right along.

5—Bonds have not turned down.

8—There is now not the ghost of a chance that the administration can fool the public into believing either (a) that this isn't a depression, or (b) that New Deal economic policies haven't failed. Therefore, it will be forced to help business.

9—The rearmament demand will continue, reinforced somewhat by increased farm income and probably a little spurt in building.

I am not bullish in proportion to the numbers of favorable and unfavorable points listed above. But they do show why no very bad decline seems probable.

Mesta Machine Earnings Up

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 28 (AP)—Mesta Machine Co. today reported 1937 net earnings of $4,668,029, after all charges, equivalent to $4.67 per share. Earnings for 1936 were $4,266,964, or $4.28 per share.

The 1937 revenue is the largest in the history of the company, which manufacturers rolling mills, and other heavy equipment for the steel industry, as well as miscellaneous steel products.

"Considering the volume of business carried over from last year," said President Lorenz Iversen, "and the amount of miscellaneous orders currently being received, I believe 1938 will be a satisfactory year."

U. S. Citizens Also 'Good Neighbors'

Forbes Tells What Is Mostly Needed to Start Recovery

By B. C. FORBES

And certainly in its trade treaties it has been so liberal that foreign nations have been able to expand their exports to so far beyond what we have been able to expand our exports to them.

Notwithstanding that the administration has donated more millions to farmers in the last few years than ever before donated anywhere, the Hull treaties have resulted in enormously increased imports of farm products we not only normally capable of raising at home, products which we did raise in quantities more than ample to take care of domestic needs before the New Deal philosophy of scarcity, of restriction and destruction of crops and food animals was inflicted upon the country.

Imports of other raw materials, as well as of certain manufactures, have also multiplied.

AIDS FOREIGNERS

All of which has tended to send abroad money for pay envelopes which should have been filled at home.

So much for this phase of Washington "good neighbor" ideas.

But whom does Washington regard as its neighbors?

Only foreigners?

Are they entitled to more consideration from Washington than neighbors within our own borders?

Do foreigners absorb the securities issued by our federal, state, municipal and other governments, and by our employment-giving companies and institutions?

OUR PEOPLE RESPONSIBLE

Not foreigners but our own people have been responsible for the great bulk of our inventions, our industrial improvements, our superiority in mass production, our business efficiency, our raising of standards of living to heights not matched anywhere else on earth.

Orderly, well-considered readjustment of laws to meet changing conditions has always been in order, is in order today, and will be in order tomorrow.

This industrialism has been made possible by the savings of many millions of small investors—a compilation made by the American Federation of Investors reveals that of 4,149,666 stockholders in 210 important American companies, not fewer than 86 per cent own less than 100 shares each.

ONE THING NEEDED

What one thing more than all others is needed to start America on a forward and upward track?

Simply a "good neighbor" policy by Washington towards the type of citizens within our own borders who have contributed incalculably to its amazing development and who are eager to redouble their effort the moment they become convinced that Washington has resolved to alter its attitude and extend to them genuine goodwill.

Is this too much to ask?

British Stowaway Captured on Liner

Seaman, Trying to Get Home to Sick Wife, Taken Off Ship Here

Seeking to snip through a bit of British consular red tape in order to afford himself a quick homeward passage, an English sailor succeeded only in involving himself with Boston police, East Boston immigration officials, and the net result was today the consul will plan his transatlantic jaunt.

The seaman, 28-year-old Basil W. Lane of Brighton-Sussex, England, was removed from the Cunard White Star liner Scythia by police and immigration officers just before the ship sailed from her Pier 8, East Boston berth, for Cobh and Liverpool.

Lane had stowed away aboard the Scythia when she sailed from New York Saturday night and was discovered while the ship was en route to Boston to embark passengers here.

HAS SICK WIFE

He explained that he had received word from home that his wife was ill and that he had planned to rush to her side by the cheapest police and immigration officers that he was without sufficient funds to book passage and that he hoped to avoid the necessary delay of securing passage through the British consul in Boston.

Because he holds a 60-day permit, allowing him to remain in this country for that period, immigration authorities here ordered Lane released from custody.

WILL HUNT THE FOX

Among those sailing was social registrite Dorothy West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. West of Chestnut Hill. Miss West, who is accompanied by her cousin, Miss Agnes Fowler of Far Hills, N. J., will visit cousins in Ireland where she plans to do a bit of fox hunting. She will return the latter part of May.

Still others embarking were the Countess of Donegal, Ireland, who has been over here visiting friends for the past month; Mrs. Mathilde D'Hondt of Cambridge, Mrs. Catherine Booth and Miss Della Lyons also of Cambridge, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas R. Toussaint of Arlington, Mr. Harry B. Little of Concord, Mrs. Alfred P. Whitney of Boston and Mrs. George S. Pryde, who had been visiting with her family in Brookline and who is en route to her home in Lauderdale, Scotland.

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Despite a rough passage the Anchor liner Caledonia from Glasgow, Belfast and Londonderry docked 12 hours ahead of schedule with 142 passengers, 13 of whom disembarked here.

Recently renovated at the cost of $85,000 and equipped with the latest safety devices the Dollar liner President Adams sailed for her 46th round the world trip.

Bound for their home in Los Angeles were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Reynolds who were among those who sailed on the President Adams. Mrs. Reynolds had been visiting her father, James W. Reardon, associate editor of the Sunday Advertiser, in Arlington for the past month.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1938

Have we not all one Father? Why do we deal treacherously, every man against his brother?—Malachi II., 10.

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. William E. Gregory, Congregational minister, Boston. The next text will be suggested by Dean Philemon F. Sturges of the Cathedral of St. Paul, Boston.

Congress Must Pass Navy Bill to Guard Our Peace and National Security

CONGRESS no longer has a CHOICE about the Navy.

The naval expansion bill supported by the President, and soon to emerge from the House Naval Affairs Committee with a favorable report, MUST BE ENACTED.

The building of an ADEQUATE NAVY has suddenly become an EMERGENCY DUTY which Congress must INSTANTLY PERFORM.

World events have CONFIRMED THE WISDOM of President Roosevelt's program of naval expansion.

We are threatened on both our coasts, because wars are in progress or threatened opposite both our coasts.

Depending on a Navy that must be shifted between the oceans like a Mexican jumping bean, through a canal VULNERABLE TO ATTACK, we invite the disaster of being caught with our whole Navy in one ocean and the WAR IN THE OTHER.

America MUST BE MADE IMPREGNABLE against attack from any direction.

We are in a WORLD AT WAR.

The ultimate hope of victory in every foreign war now raging or contemplated rests upon TRICKING AMERICA into support of one side or the other.

Warring nations WILL STOP AT NOTHING to get us into war.

We must stop at nothing to KEEP OUT OF IT.

We must avoid entangling alliance with either Communism or Fascism.

America is in a position now to buy peace and security at the CHEAPEST PRICE any nation ever paid for these greatest benefactions to which civilized men can aspire.

Every day of neglect and delay and indecision in Congress on the President's defensive program IMPERILS THAT POSITION.

Every voice to which Congress listens in opposition to that program is the voice of an enemy of necessary military defense, an opponent, wittingly or unwittingly, of national peace and security.

The Editor Says:

"Excepting the Federal Government, the United States taxation system consists of 175,000 local, county and State units, it was revealed today."—Boston Evening American.

THE REVOLT AGAINST TAXES which has become widespread in the United States must continue to be a largely WASTED EFFORT until the people stop the leak of taxes through local government as well as through the Federal Government.

Congress is at least LISTENING to protests against Federal taxes, because the public has its eye on them and ON CONGRESS.

But nobody is keeping an eye on the staggering array of 175,000 taxing and spending agencies of State, county and local governments.

Everywhere local taxes GO UP AND UP.

But local taxes never come DOWN, always go UP.

The American people of course should not pay LESS attention to over-taxation by the Federal Government, and in fact should keep on protesting to Congress until they get REAL REDUCTIONS.

But they certainly should pay MORE attention to the GREATER COST and GREATER WASTE in their home communities and States.

CHEAPER AUTOMOBILES

"In an effort to loosen the jam in the used car field and to make room for new models, various Boston automobile dealers announce substantial price reductions."—Boston Evening American.

Here is assurance of a happy summer for thousands of readers. Modern automobiles will bring enjoyment to families never before able to own them.

We are always glad to say a good word in favor of the "auto." For, as the late Arthur Brisbane so wisely said: "The American family needs a car. It is as necessary as wings are to a bird, or as joy to the hearts of the old and of children."

Drastic price reductions in the used car market had to come. Late-model roadsters, sedans, coupes and limousines filled showrooms; new cars went begging.

And the automobile industry, the prosperity of which depends on the constant, uninterrupted movement of NEW cars from factories to buyers' garages, found itself in a serious slump.

Naturally the man with limited means benefits greatly. He gets the car he wants, often at HALF THE PRICE he would have been obliged to pay a year ago. And, buying the car, he paves the way for the sale of a new model and for jobs and wages for automotive workers.

MONEY FOR FLOOD RELIEF

"President Roosevelt allocated $17,419,862 of relief funds to 31 States for use if Spring thaws bring flood conditions. Massachusetts receives $600,000; Connecticut, $250,000, and New Hampshire, $38,985."—International News Service.

The Government's action was not unexpected. Months ago we said money would be reserved for emergency flood relief. Now Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal does precisely that.

The reason for this promise of financial assistance is obvious. It is an attempt to make river valley residents breathe easier, feel more secure. Before them is supposed to be a vision of kindly Uncle Sam's coming to their aid in the nick of time and dragging them out of a mad whirlpool.

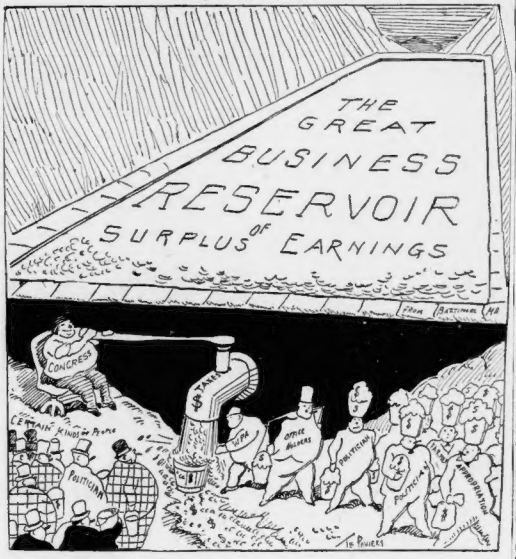
This is a happy thought, of course. It is good to know that a rescuer will be near when disaster comes. But would it not be better for the rescuer to prevent the disaster?

We think so. That is why we advocate ADEQUATE flood control projects throughout New England. Common sense says that in the long run the money required to rehabilitate flood-damaged cities will be many times the amount needed to build dams and reservoirs.

Unfortunately, the Government in Washington doesn't seem able to agree. It still thinks that the man who went to sea in a leaky boat with a life-preserver under his arm displayed more wisdom than did the man who delayed his departure, repaired the boat, then went to sea.

How Long Will It Last?

By T. E. Powers



Taxes are necessary, because Government has to perform essential services for the people and provide for their security.

But waste, extravagance and patronage in Government are evils, not essentials, and make for insecurity.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

PURELY personal piffle: In Africa a cocktail is called a sun-downer. Dullest humor touch in modern literature—the Hyman Kaplan stuff. Fulton Oursler is the writingest of the magazine editors. The celebrity Bucks—Gene, Frank and Pearl S.

The only hanker I have for coffee is with cheese cake. Frank Ward O'Malley, greatest reporter of his time, rarely wrote a sentence without a misspelled word. Several years ago Dale Carnegie suggested we get together to do some writing and radio broadcasting. I saw no percentage in that.

The late Newton D. Baker could answer two phones, dictate a letter and read a book, simultaneously. A patriotic society is collecting the propaganda they claim has been concealed in the columns of three book reviewers and one dramatic critic, which may cause red blushes. If I have to hear a grand opera singer, I'll take Kirsten Flagstad.

I once thought Mitzi Green a poisonous rat, but now think she is one of our cleverest entertainers. Fascinating street names: Tottenham Court Road, Piccadilly and Bubbling Well Road in Shanghai. My grandfather when worried used to shine up an old copper cent on his corduroy pants.

Collin Mulhado, a British native of Jamaica, and I lived for some time at the same hotel in New York, and after a lapse of 18 years ran into each other recently. Although gray-haired he was still out dancing. I was also gray but not dancing. It is the stupidest form of wit to make puns on a person's name. But somehow it struck me Conde Nast had the dandiest for that purpose.

In 16 years association with my syndicate chief, V. V. McNitt, there has never been a single disagreement or exchange of unpleasant words. Both Scotch, too. I never feel that The Chief (Santa Fe crack train) has really entered the real West until I see the Indian trinket sellers on that Albuquerque station walk. For two winters I played billiards with the late actor, Lawrence D'Orsay, chiefly to hear his Bah Jove accent. He rarely used a verb.

The kindliest and most helpful critic I ever had in my writing is Meredith Nicholson. The lustiest appetite I know is that of Herb Roth, the caricaturist. I've seen him order a minute steak for dessert after a whopping meal—and eat it, too, with a relish! Best minute steak in the world, incidentally—at The Colony.

Our aggressive Boston invariably looks at a clipped French poodle with astonishment and trots meekly on as though to say "Well, I'll be durned!" The only costume scene I can abide on the stage is a minuet with music box orchestration. That's a strange book John O'Hara Cosgrave, of the Dutch Treat and old Sunday World, has written. He calls it "Academy for Souls" and seems to have gone a bit mystic and discovered his soul and a Creator.

Gelett Burgess is turning out a magazine piece on why some slang survives and the rest perishes. Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon dulled the sting of a studio yawn by touring the world in personal appearance. I have a card from Australia. They are storing up something more valuable than money—travel memories. The city to me most remindful of Paris is Mexico City.

Secret urge: I've always wanted to get Clem McCarthy and Floyd Gibbons into a hot argument about something. And then let someone try to get in a word edgewise. After Grandma took me to the matinee of Lincoln J. Carter's "Fast Mail," they had to give me a sedative for two nights running, the excitement was that great. For a year afterward my entertainment fare was restricted to magic lantern shows.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

IT JUST happened that historic Cain's warehouse closed its doors almost on the day that a play, virtually without scenery and entirely without properties, opened to critical acclaim and the prospect of a long run.

For more than 50 years, the mortuary Mr. Cain and his father before him carted to their gloomy brick mausoleum the rococco splendors of European chancelleries, Viennese drawing rooms, Louise-Quatorze palaces, sleazy tenements and huge Belascoesque cycloramas in which old masters of stagecraft sought the ultimate realism of the theater.

Some were overnight flops, some were slower fade-outs, some had long runs, but Patrick J. Cain, with his amiable gold-toothed smile, was always just around the corner, waiting with bland indifference to gather in all the effulgent make-believe. Cain was a naughty word around a play shop. Its utterance on an opening night would throw the cast into a cat fit.

So, as Cain gets his exit cue, "Our Town," by Thornton Wilder, opens with a stage equipment of a half-dozen chairs on a semi-darkened stage, with Frank Craven ambling around amiably, telling what it is all about.

All business and action, mixing pancakes, serving food, etc., is all done by pantomime, in the manner of that new parlor game in which one player acts a proverb or classical line for the others to guess. And, as the box office hangs up the S. R. O. sign, David Belasco is spinning in his grave.

"Our Town" could go on tour without any more equipment than an overnight bag for each player. You could find a few chairs around a cross-roads opera house; that's about all they would need. It would be interesting to see whether the interior would take to this shirt-sleeve staging as did the big town.

It isn't altogether new. Twenty years ago the Ben Greet players put on Shakespeare on the bare boards throughout the country. If I remember correctly, only the cognoscenti seemed to get the idea. It was nothing to cheer about.

This onlooker likes his theater with a reasonable dash of old-fashioned realism. He likes to know that the gal is actually dishing a round of coffee instead of having to guess about it, as you do in "Our Town."

As I see it, there isn't any essential virtue in simplicity and no matter how it is garnished, or how lacking in such embellishment, "the play's the thing."

There's one commendable thing about this new undernourished-looking stagecraft. The intelligentsia aren't taking a hand in it. There's no need for another Don Marquis to blast the Hermiones with a devastating line.

It comes in unpretentiously, without any noble resolve to reform the theater, and we can take it or leave it.

The great Elizabethan drama boiled up in just that way, coming out of taverns and pot houses with no precious "little theater" movement fanning it up. In both art and politics, the most hopeful things seem to be those which "just happen."

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.

SENATE opponents of President Roosevelt's program to reorganize the whole executive side of the Government will not dare to attempt another filibuster in an effort to sidetrack it or defeat it.

It is figured that public opinion probably wouldn't support another filibuster so soon after the so-called filibuster which brought the anti-lynching bill to an untimely grave.

Moreover, the Senate wouldn't stand for it. There would probably be a break-down in the rules, and cloture might be fastened on that body of more or less august Solons.

Now, the preservation of the Senate, without gag rule or closure cutting off debate, is being safeguarded more jealously today than ever before in the history of Congress.

With Democracy crushed between Fascism and Communism in Europe, and dictatorships astride prostrate China, with Great Britain putting the screws on public expression, the United States Senate stands today virtually the only free open forum left on earth.

This is why it was possible for a handful of Southern Senators to prevent the passage of the anti-lynching bill, in face of the fact that that bill would have passed by an overwhelming majority if it could have been brought to a vote.

There would have been political advantage to the Republicans in passing the bill, thus widening the split between New Deal radicalism and Southern Democratic conservatism.

But the preservation of the freedom of unlimited debate in the Senate was regarded as paramount to every consideration. And wisely so.

She would evade any other treaty as callously as she has broken that one.

Do you realize what obedience to that pact has cost the American taxpayers?

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

IS THE Italian-German link beginning to melt under the heat of the South Tyrol question?

The South Tyrol, formerly belonging to Austria, was part of the Italian spoils of war. Its population is composed of Germans.

Under Mussolini the rights of this German minority have been entirely disregarded. The "Italianization" of these Teutons is again being protested in Munich, where pamphlets are being circulated which call on the German people not "to be deluded by Italian eyewash."

Germany is demanding self-government for the Germans in Czechoslovakia and Danzig. Will she next turn her attention to the Germans in the South Tyrol?

And will Mussolini continue to wash the eyes of the South Tyrol Germans with Chianti instead of Munich beer?

Technique of an American demagogue:

1—While sitting in a New Deal swivel-chair he begins to nurse a yen to be governor of some State or even sweetly dreams of the White House.

2—He spends his undistributed and untaxed surplus to make a radio speech to the nation denouncing the rich, the well-to-do, the successful and all those who have made more money than he has.

3—It is not necessary for him to believe a word he has uttered. All that he has got to do is to corral the laboring vote and create a sensation in the minds of other "philanthropoids" and swivel-chair Utopians.

4—Denounce anyone who attempts to answer him as an "Economic Earl," a "Fascist" or a "Malefactor of Great Wealth."
